Strong New Laws Proposed To Settle Labor Disputes

U.S. DIDN'T SEEK AGREEMENT ON ABMs

OTTAWA (CP)—The United States at no time sought or received Canadian agreement to go ahead with building of the Sentinel anti-ballistic missile system, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons today.

Reporting on his two-day trip to Washington, the prime minister also said he had not protested the U.S. action, although he had expressed concern about its effects.

Did Nixon Talks Achieve Anything?

By ANTHONY WESTELL

WASHINGTON— The Nixon-Trudeau talks have been at a high level. There has been a good deal of pomp, pagentry and puffery, ranging from the flattery of a state dinner to the studied informality of a presidential arm thrown in a comradely way around the prime ministerial shoulders.

Westell

An assessment now has to be tentative because we do not yet know fully what went on behind closed doors. And it has to be made in the realistic context of what could reasonsuggested by dramatized news stories.

Both Canadian and U.S. sources insist that this was primarily a get-acquainted mission. Nixon has already been to Europe to lay out his lines of communication with U.S. allies there. He now wanted to establish his relations with the northern neighbor. Ally and trading partner he wanted to explore the attitudes of a prime minister who has been oversold here as a jet-set swinger and radical thinker—the antithesis of Nixon's solid conservatism.

No Hard Decisions

Trudeau, for his part, has been busy at home and had not pressed for an early meeting with the new president, but was pleased to be asked to Washington and curious to size-up Nixon for himself.

There were also some current problems which would have to be negotiated between the two governments, and which might best be set on the road to solution by the two heads of government indicating their interest in them.

There were, in other words, no hard or urgent decisions to be made and every reason why Trudeau and Nixon should at least appear to get on well together. Indeed, if they had not been warm and well disposed toward each other in these circumstances it would have been rather alarming.

So there is no cause to be euphoric about the friendly relations that have been proclaimed, and no reason to be dismayed because no great decisions have been made.

For example, attention should not focus on the ABM question, and what has nor has not been agreed in this area. News reports have concentrated on this issue because it happens to be a fresh subject of political controversy both in Canada and the United States. But the truth is that it was not a dominating question on the Trudeau-Nixon agenda.

Pointed Questions

The Canadian mission was briefed on technical aspects of the U.S. safeguard system, and on the way Canadian air space might be involved. Trudeau asked some pointed questions about the rationale behind the U.S. decision to deploy ABMs. But there was no element of conflict in the talks, and the political as opposed to technical discussions on the subject were not much in the area of U.S. - Canadian relations, but in the general context of how ABMs fit into Nixon's desire to negotiate with the Soviet Union on arms limitation.

Nor should too much be made at this stage of agreements on oil, wheat and satellites. Canadian officials are genuinely delighted that: the Nixon administration not only agreed to early talks on updating the continental market arrangements to take account of large new oil discoveries in Alaska; but also agreed to put into the joint statement the phrase that there is a "common interest of the two countries in the expansion of cross-order movement of energy." This is held to imply an expanding rather than a contracting market for Canadian oil in the U.S.

Australia is Key

U.S. ministers made no attempt to deny that they have undercut international grain agreement prices, and promised to join with Canada in the forthcoming world conference on wheat prices in trying to restore the floor. The key to this problem, it is said, is Australia, a major exporter which began price-cutting. Prime Minister John Gorton will in a few days to meet Nixon before going to Ottawa, and will be pressed in both capitals to join in the attempt to restore price levels.

Nixon cut swiftly through the bureaucratic process to agree in principle that the U.S. will provide launch facilities for Canada's domestic satellite.

But as Trudeau himself emphasized Tuesday, the agreements in these three

Stay in for Present Urges NATO Review

OTTAWA (UPI)—Parliament's external affairs and defence committee recommended today that Canada stay in the NATO alliance and continue to maintain troops in Europe.

In a majority report tabled in the House of Commons, the committee presented five basic recommendations urging that "no action" be taken to withdraw from the alliance "at the present time."

The five recommendations are:

- Continued Canadian membership in the alliance.
- Canada should continue to maintain its present troop strength in Europe.
- A prompt review of the country's military role in NATO should be undertaken so that negotiations with the Allies might take place in time to order new equipment.
- Canada should maintain its present roles at least until present equipment becomes obsolete.
- Whatever course of action the government took, the committee recommended that there is no role of neutrality that would be acceptable to Canada.

Picketing Rule Changes Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A government-commissioned study in labor-management relations in Canada recommends creation of a public interest disputes commission with powers just short of compulsory arbitration.

This is but one of a multitude of recommendations by the study group, headed by Dean H. D. Woods of McGill University, in its report on Canadian industrial relations tabled in the Commons today by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

The 100,000-word report is packed with social comment and economic theory.

Other recommendations propose greater powers by conciliation officers, new picketing and boycotting laws, creation of a federal-provincial incomes-and-cost research board, retention of the right to strike in the federal public service and a "bill of rights" and independent judiciary for union members.

The Woods commission was established in December, 1966. Many of its recommendations concern the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, the legislation covering workers in areas under federal jurisdiction.

WOODS

SUGGEST COMMISSION

The key recommendations:

—Creation of a three-member public interest disputes commission, independent of government departments and reporting to the prime minister. It would determine special procedures for resolving disputes in industries under federal jurisdiction where the public interest is likely to be jeopardized.

—This commission could impose procedures short of arbitration, seizure and trusteeship binding for periods of up to three years.

—An incomes and costs research board would be established as an "educational and advisory body" which would not publish guidelines. The provinces would be involved, possibly through membership on a federal-provincial advisory council.

—The right to strike by federal employees should not be removed. "We are mindful of the corrosive effects of compulsory arbitration, which would be the only reasonable alternative . . . ." Consideration should be given to combining the Canada labor relations board and public service staff relations board.

—A code for primary and secondary picketing would give workers the right to refuse to cross picket lines to do work normally done by strikers. In other situations, workers refusing to cross lines would be subject to disciplinary action.

—Legislation prescribing basic procedural rights in internal union affairs, including the right to be heard, to be tried by an impartial body, to counsel and so on. A public review board would hear appeals where union membership is to be suspended or ended.

CITES MANY STRIKES

The report notes a rash of strikes in recent years, many of them affecting the public which has a "predisposition to blame unions and collective bargaining for inflation." Nevertheless, the report concludes ". . . We are confident that collective bargaining can adjust and can survive."

"The collective bargaining system, if it is to survive, must change to reflect the nature and functioning of the employer and the environment."

"The challenge will be to integrate free collective bargaining with industrial and national planning, a challenge which has not been met in social countries."

Such bargaining was only one of the many possible mechanisms through which inflationary forces are transmitted. It might help to retard inflation through long-term agreements "which temporarily hold wages below the level to which the forces of the market could drive them."

Victoria Man Wins $52,000; Decides to Take Short Holiday

A 46-year-old B.C. civil servant took the day off, but called on his colleagues in the Legislative Buildings today after winning $52,000 in the Irish sweepstake.

This afternoon he was in the back room of a downtown candy store he and his sisters own, helping with the making of chocolate easter eggs.

Arthur W. Lees, 2612 Richmond, learned at 6:30 a.m. today that he had won $52,000 on second-place Saratoga Skiddy in the Lincolnshire Handicap at Doncaster, England.

"I'll say it was a surprise," he said. "I've been buying sweep tickets ever since the last war and never won a cent before. "How will I spend the money? Well, spending money is never very difficult. It's how you spend it that matters, and I shall take my time deciding."

Although he is a third-generation candy maker, Lees' regular employ is in the B.C. government water rights branch as a draughtsman.

SHARE GOOD NEWS

Just after 8:30 a.m., he left his trim, well-kept bungalow on Richmond and drove down to the Legislative Buildings to "share the good news" with his colleagues.

But, before starting work, Lees phoned the good news to his sister, Joan, in Prince George.

"She was simply thrilled," he said.

Joan and another sister, Winifred of Victoria, are his partners in Lees English Sweet Shop at 643 Yates Street. The business was founded by their grandfather, Job Lees, in Halifax, Yorkshire, in 1892.

In 1911, Job migrated to Medicine Hat, and operated a store in partnership with his son, Harold. They moved to Victoria in 1928 and opened a third candy store on View Street.

Lees and his sisters have owned the store on Yates since their father's death in 1967.

Lees is taking a short holiday from his government job and will ponder the problem of how best to use his winnings on the sweep.

Lees is one of six Canadians

Lower Deductible Clauses Allowed in Plan—Peterson

Attorney-General Peterson Tuesday said there is nothing in the government's proposed new auto insurance scheme to prevent underwriters providing collision insurance without any deductible or just a nominal deductible.

His statements, in an interview, contradicted the criticisms of Jack Robertson, president of the Insurance Agents' Association of B.C.

Robertson said the proposed $250 statutory limit on lawsuits for collision repair costs means insurance companies will decline to insure car owners for collision cover below $250.

"Why should it?" demanded Peterson in reply.

NO REASON

"The damage can be recovered up to $250 so there is no reason why there shouldn't be a lower deductibility.

"And it shouldn't be more expensive. It's when it gets above $250 that it becomes more expensive because there's no recovery."

The attorney-general said insurance firms may tend to write only $250 deductible collision policies but that would be their own decision.

"I would agree that the $250 would be more common but there is nothing in the legislation to prohibit a deductibility of less than $250," he said.

Peterson said the proposal followed the Wootton Royal Commission proposal to create an "incentive" for safer driving by prohibiting recovery of all collision repair costs in court, but he pointed out the government bill did not go as far as the $100 maximum recovery the royal commission proposed.

YOUNGER DRIVERS

He said that with the $250 ceiling on lawsuits and optional collision insurance, younger drivers will benefit most.

He said as a rule the younger drivers own older cars and cannot afford high premiums for collision coverage.

Peterson said he doubted that the mandatory ceiling on collision recoveries would result in insurance companies boosting the premium rates even for "innocent" drivers involved in accidents.

This had been suggested by Robertson also as another consequence of the bill.

Meanwhile, Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) told reporters the government plan will sweeten the pot of private insurance companies by lifting medical and hospital expenses from accident claims.

He said medical and hospital bills will be charged to medicare and hospitalization programs under the new legislation instead of to the auto insurance firms as they are at present.

"This bill just sweetens the pot for private insurance companies by passing the financial burden on to the public purse as represented by these (medicare and hospitalization) plans," said Macdonald.

Egyptian Oil Plants Crippled by Barrage

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked an Arab guerrilla base near the Jordanian town of Salt today, the army announced.

A spokesman said all planes returned safely.

Salt is 10 miles east of the Jordan River ceasefire line and about 15 miles west of Amman, the Jordanian capital.

Guerrilla bases around Salt came under heavy Israeli attack last summer, Israel charging that the barren, stony area is packed with saboteurs staging raids against the Jewish state. Heavier military action has centred lately on the Suez Canal.

Egypt's Port Suez, at the southern neck of the Canal, appears to have been crippled by the four-hour Israeli artillery barrage Monday, an authoritative military source said today.

The source said both oil refineries at the port were hit by Israeli guns. Port operations were severely reduced and the damage halted the flow of oil from the offshore Morgan field in the Red Sea, that supplies about 8,500,000 tons of crude oil a year, two-thirds of Egypt's requirements.

Under th' new insurance law you pay premiums an' likely pay fer yer accident too. So whut's new?

$540,800 Bank Theft

LONDON (Reuters)—A four-man gang robbed a bank here today and escaped with jewels and cash worth about $540,800. Before leaving they locked the manager inside the safe. Then they locked up the bank and drove off in a car.

VICTORIA'S WEATHER TIES RECORD FOR DAY

A temperature record was equalled Tuesday when the thermometer nudged over the 60-degree mark in Greater Victoria.

Weatherman Allan McQuarrie said today it was the first time it was that balmy on March 25 since 1934. He added that 60 degrees were also registered in 1908 and in 1926.

He said it should remain sunny and warm through Friday with a bit of cloud activity Thursday morning.

areas are not final. Rather, they lay the foundation for friendly negotiation of what remain very tough problems.

The more substantial reason for a judgment, at this state, that the Trudeau-Nixon talks have been successful is that the two leaders seem to have got on extremely well together. As they said Tuesday, they have established the sort of relationship in which they will feel free to pick up the phone and talk from time to time.

One might say that that is no more than could reasonably be expected between friends and allies. But it is well to remember that John Diefenbaker was not on those terms with John Kennedy, and Lester Pearson and Lyndon Johnson came to be very cool toward each other.

Trudeau and Nixon are now vary warm toward each other, and their meetings of minds is perhaps best shown in an area which has not received much attention but which—as Trudeau confirmed—engaged a substantial amount of their private time together.

They had both wanted to discuss the problems of social unrest and alienation. Nixon was interested in Trudeau's ideas on political communication. Trudeau, as he said Tuesday, wanted to know if Nixon's emphasis on law and order was merely repressive, or if it had social and psychological components—in other words, if the president was a reactionary.

As the Washington Post reported from its own sources Tuesday Nixon remarked in conversation at the state dinner on Monday that he had found Trudeau especially illuminating on problems of alienation among young people in both countries: and as Trudeau said at a press conference, on this problem, as on others, he had found Nixon pragmatic and keenly aware of the problems of communication.

Think Much Alike

The two men thus explored each other's thoughts and attitudes on this subject, and found them much alike. They established confidence in each other, which was perhaps the main purpose of the visit.

Trudeau, in any event, flew home Tuesday night quite convinced that the Nixon administration is serious in promising consultation with Canada and sincere in avoiding any suspicion of pressure diplomacy or power politics.

These are ideas and theories that remain to be tested in times when the need is for tough decision rather than good intentions. But what was established beyond doubt Tuesday was the excellent impression which Trudeau created in his lunch meeting with perhaps the most influential audience in the U.S. outside the White House, the members of the National Press Club.

Trudeau had obviously been gaining in confidence ever since his rather nervous, even obsequious, opening remarks at the White House on Monday. He did well by all accounts, for example, in his brief speech at the state dinner that night.

Fresh and Glowing

By Tuesday lunchtime he was in fine form and fresh and glowing from his warm farewell scene with the president in the White House rose garden.

It was fascinating—and a little nostalgic—to watch him communicate to the U.S. press the same sense of style and intellect which captivated the Canadian press a year ago. It has worn a little thin in Ottawa, but it is entrancingly new in Washington.

After his question-and-answer session at the club lunch, it was easy to overhear seasoned U.S. newsmen using such words and phrases as "brilliant" and "a personal triumph."

Two of them in fact were heard to award the final accolade by discussing the possibility of buying Canadian stocks to profit from what they thought would obviously be a high quality of Canadian government.

who won $52,000 each with tickets on Saratoga Skiddy. Three Canadians won prizes of $130,000 each with tickets on Foggy Bell, winner of the Lincolnshire Handicap.

Four Canadians, including Heather Dunsford of North Vancouver, won $26,000 each on Kamundu, who finished third.

L. Sanders of Burnaby won $52,000.

Winners of the top prizes are Rose Strome, 67, Toronto; Hilmer Koch, a grocer of Elora, Ont., and Therese Lauzier, Montreal.

Sad but Wise Students Welcomed

Students who enroll in the B.C. Vocational School in Victoria should be "at least 17 and usually 18," an educator told the Margaret Jenkins School PTA Tuesday.

Fred Dunford, principal of the vocational school, was a member of a panel of educators invited to describe some of the job-training opportunities open to students.

He said students under 18 usually lack discipline and motivation.

"They usually haven't been kicked in the teeth enough."

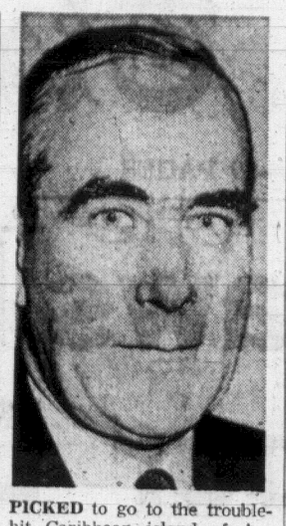

Rev. Walter Donald, youth coordinator for Christ Church Cathedral, outlined a job-counselling project conducted with 120 students.

Students discussed careers with young people in the working world, then formed small groups to talk with representatives of professions they were interested in.

Final step in the project was one of three days work in the field they wanted to follow.

G. A. V. Thomson, director of high school instruction for the Greater Victoria School board, said guidance courses and counselling are available to students from Grades 8 to 12.

Alan Batey, principal of the Institute of Adult Studies, said students coming back for a "second chance" at high school were highly motivated, and it is "something of a challenge" to meet the demands they make on the school.

PICKED to go to the trouble-hit Caribbean island of Anguilla is Britain's chief United Nations representative, Lord Caradon. He will leave Friday.

African Card Fund Flounders

A Christmas card fund campaign launched here in December on behalf of an African mission has yielded 146 donations totalling $1,620.

But it cost $2,680 to mount the drive.

Father Nico Hendriks, who operates a printing plant in Tabora, Tanzania, where wandering elephants have been known to interrupt the project, sent greeting cards to everyone in the Victoria telephone directory. A friend here sent it to him.

Trouble was, advance publicity on his fund drive went astray and most Victorians who were asked to send $2 to a bank fund here feared a fraud. Subsequently The Times learned his drive was a genuine attempt to help illiterate parishioners.

BLAMES HIMSELF

Father Nico wrote a letter saying he blames himself, adding, "You will understand that we are very disappointed that so few have reacted upon our cry for help."

He states, "Though I would prefer to thank everybody (who did contribute) with a personal letter, I feel unable to do so as the cost would be increased. . . ." He asked The Times to say thanks.

And if anyone is interested in making an Easter donation which will help in the Christian and secular education of his natives in their grass huts, his account here is stil open.

Donations should be addressed to TMP Printing Department, care of Bank of Montreal, 1225 Douglas St.

Father Nico said earlier he chose Victoria for his campaign because the size of the community was as great as he and his helpers could cover with 60,000 appeals. All of his costs were related to printing, stationery and stamps. All work was by volunteers. The Catholic Church here verified the need.

SFU Moderates Win

VANCOUVER (CP) — Moderates completed a virtual sweep of next year's student council at suburban Burnaby's Simon Fraser University, winning all eight second-slate positions in voting concluded Friday. Moderate students, led by president-elect Norm Wickstrom, have been elected to all 13 voting positions on the council.

Yahya Vows to 'Bring Back Sanity'

KARACHI (AP) — Pakistan's new military dictator, Gen. Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, told his turbulent country today he would "bring back sanity" to set the stage for free elections.

"I wish to make it absolutely clear to you that I have no ambition other than the creation of conditions conducive to the establishment of a constitutional governmennment," he said in his first broadcast after taking over from President Mohammed Ayub Khan.

Sixteen hours before Ayub Khan resigned after appointing Yahya supreme commander of Pakistan's armed forces and chief martial law administrator. Yahya's promise to "bring back sanity" was the same made by Ayub when he seized power in 1958 and ruled by martial law for three years.

Ayub, who announced earlier he would not seek re-election next year, admitted Tuesday night this did not satisfy his political opponents and he could not cope with mob violence wracking Pakistan's eastern half on the other side of India.

"My first task is to put the administration back on the rails," Yahya said. "Strikes and industrial unrest have brought the nation to the edge of an abyss.

PROMISES SWIFT ACTION

"The nation has to be pulled back to safety and normal conditions have to be restored without delay. I and the armed forces could not remain idle spectators of this state of near anarchy."

He assured the people the armed forces "have no political ambitions and will not prop up any individual or party," and he indicated he would go through with constitutional reforms promised by Ayub before his resignation.

Yahya, 52, is considered to have pro-Western views despite visits to Moscow and Peking earlier this year. He fought with British forces in Italy and the Middle East during the Second World War and was appointed Ayub's military commander in East Pakistan in 1962. In the 1965 Indian-Pakistani war he commanded an infantry division and was decorated for bravery. He became commander-in-chief of the army in 1966.

In India, situated between East and West Pakistan, members of the governing Congress party expressed fear that the turmoil in Pakistan would lead to "political adventurism or religious fanaticism," meaning new attacks in disputed Kashmir or on Pakistan's Hindu minority.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Conditions were clear in southern sections of the province overnight under the continuing influence of the high pressure area. The next disturbance now approaching the Charlottes will move southeastward and weaken. This will spread rain into the north coast this afternoon and a few showers into Vancouver Island and the southeastern interior tonight. Another area of high pressure will build into the coast Thursday and give generally clearing skies. Temperatures will be a little cooler Thursday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

There are countless medical records available that give information on migraine headaches that appear when the spring winds blow.

In Hawaii there is the wind known as the "Kona." It is a dry wind, and many Hawaiians feel very uncomfortable when it blows, especiallly after weeks or months of living comfortably in the normal, rain-bearing Pacific trade winds. People who tend to be migrainous are especially glad when the dry, windy season is gone.

In Switzerland, scientists have studied the effects on patients suffering from headaches during the time of the dry and warm wind that comes down on Alpine valleys. That particular wind is called the "foehn" and has been a subject for study by medical people for many decades.

North America has its many peculiar winds, and they all affect people to a certain extent, especially if the winds are dry.

'It's Getting Difficult To Live Up to Reputation'

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — After a particularly glowing introduction as "that dashing young prime minister," Pierre Elliott Trudeau smilingly conceded that its getting "more and more difficult to live up to" his swinging reputation.

In the opinion of many of Washington's hard-bitten society reporters he certainly failed to do just that on his two-day state visit that ended Tuesday night.

But to those who have observed him at close range for some time, he wasn't half trying.

For one thing, the schedule of meetings and the behind-the-scenes homework required for them was staggering. Also, there was speculation Trudeau may have wanted to provide a sharp contrast with the glare of publicity given his activities in London during the recent Commonwealth prime ministers conference.

Whatever the reason, he was in the assessment of one writer "the very model of protocol-bound prime minister."

Outside of Washington, the Trudeau visit created little interest in the United States. Some major newspapers carried Page 1 pictures and stories. There was little editorial comment.

FOUND DINNER DULL

By all Washington accounts the main social function—the formal White House dinner in his honor—was starchy and dull.

Wrote Isabelle Shelton of the Washington Star:

"Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau came to Washington with a reputation as a dynamic, swinging bachelor but he didn't prove it at the White House dinner in his honor.

"As a matter of fact, it might have helped the proceedings immensely if he had. . . . What that party needed was some of the zip and zing that Trudeau is reputed to have infused into sagging soirees with such hijinks as standing on his head, sliding down a bannister or doing a somersault in midair."

Richard H. Boyce of the Washington Daily News, calling him "this many-splendored swinger," says that "however much he may turn on at other times, Mr. Trudeau is all business here."

And Margaret Crimmins of the Washington Post says:

"The Trudeaumania—particularly among women—about which we've heard so much didn't come off in celebrity-hardened Washington."

Almost all the secretaries, nurses and other women Miss Crimmins interviewed were less than overwhelmed.

'DIDN'T LOOK DASHING'

"I've read that he's supposed to be so dashing; he didn't look that way to me," she quoted a nurse from Arlington, Va., as saying. "If you saw him on the street you wouldn't notice him."

But, in the opinion of Miss Crimmins, their reaction was due to the fact "Trudeau doesn't really come off until he opens his mouth, projects those clear blue eyes, raises an enigmatic eyebrow, switches from French to English. . . ."

PIERRE
. . . work wilting flower

In a more serious vein, The Post says in an editorial that the "chief significance" of the visit "may well be that it has given some Americans a first-hand acquaintance with a dashing new figure in Canadian public life."

Trudeau "has made a specialty of breaking with tradition" and "the least that can be said is that his unique style and his unorthodox methods have spurred interest in his country, whether or not he succeeds in solving its formidable problems."

He has "demonstrated that he has courage and imagination."

One of the main complaints about the White House dinner was that the Nixons kept Trudeau to themselves throughout the dinner and enertainment.

BROKE UP EARLY

Trudeau left at 11:10 p.m. and the Nixons went upstairs a little later although Nixon is quoted as having told guests to "stay and dance—you don't have to just because we do."

Miss Helton reports that Defence Secretary and Mrs. Melvin Laird and others "tried to get dancing started . . . but the slow, sedate tunes of the Marine band and the yawning empty spaces on the big dance floor were not conducive to a very festive air."

"They were rolling up the sidewalk, as the saying goes, by 11:30 o'clock, the last guest having departed. It was the earliest end to a White House state dinner in many a year."

When Lyndon Johnson lived there, such parties often went on well past 2 a.m.

Actually, what humor did appear came mainly from Trudeau with his elephant joke getting a howling response when he addressed the press club luncheon Tuesday.

"Living next to you"—the United States—"is somewhat like sleeping with an elephant. Regardless of how friendly the beast, one is affected by every twitch and grunt."

Asked when Communist China might respond to Canada's initiative in seeking diplomatic relations, he said some speculated that China would take as long as the country involved took in asking for it.

In Canada's case, he said, that would mean 20 years—"a frightening prospect."

However, there were even more frightening prospects. If Canada should seek relations with the Vatican that could mean 2,000 years.

In New York, The Times carried several stories and pictures of the visit on its front page.

James Reston, executive editor of the Times, says Prime Minister Trudeau demonstrated in Washington "what is meant by the understandings and the differences between good neighbors."

Reston, in a column on today's Times' editorial page, says Trudeau showed in his two-day visit to Washington that "honest talk, a sense of history, and a sense of pity for the poor and understanding for the young . . . are still powerful forces in world politics."

USED LOGIC, WIT

He says he had a "kind of a triumph" because he cut across savage arguments in the U.S. over the big issues of East-West relations and "suggested by logic and wit that maybe the truth didn't lie with extremes."

The Boston Herald Traveller had a Page 1 story while the Record American carried the story on an inside page with a Page 1 picture. There was no editorial comment in Boston.

The Baltimore papers also carried no editorial comment. The News-American and The Sun gave the story front-page play and The Sun accompanied its story with a picture.

Chicago newspapers played the story on the inside pages with no editorial comment.

World Pilots May Strike On Hijacking

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations warned today that it may call a worldwide strike for 12 or 24 hours if airline hijacking is not suitably punished.

A resolution unanimously adopted by the federation's annual conference said it may also take these actions against countries that don't punish hijackers:

1. A ban on all air traffic into the country.
2. Co-ordinated action to restrict movement of the country's aircraft and to restrict movement of cargo to and from the country, either by air or surface.

The federation represents 70 per cent of the world's 6,500 airline pilots. The Soviet Union was represented by observers, but Cuba, the chief target of the resolution, was not represented.

Three Hands on the Wheel

THE AUTOMOBILE INSURance legislation introduced by Attorney-General Peterson raises some new concepts in law, some new restrictions on personal liberties, and some new problems for drivers in an increasingly hazardous traffic environment. The bills agree in part with proposals of the Wootton commission, but fortunately fall short of a complete prohibition of resort to the courts for recompense for damage. This reimbursement, however, is limited to $250 and the law thereby restricts a long-established legal right. The legislation also curbs the heretofore recognized right of an individual to enter into a contract of insurance against any conceivable happening, for which he is willing to pay a premium.

Most of the difficulties of the legislation apparently will arise from the imposition on straight commercial insurance principles designed to protect the individual against loss, of an additional element of social punishment and deterrence. In other words, the normal process of insurance is now complicated by measures designed to achieve certain extraneous effects. It is hardly to be expected that there will not be maladjustments under such circumstances. The proof of the pudding will lie, of course, in the success of these efforts to effect the desired result—which in a word is to decrease the rate of traffic accidents.

The philosophy of the Wootton report was that traffic accidents are so prevalent today as to be more or less out of the control of many motorists. Regardless of driving ability or care exercised, an accident at some time or other is deemed almost inevitable. Thus the hazard becomes one against which the individual must carry insurance regardless of guilt or innocence, just as he would insure against storm damage or injury from flood.

The new accent on recompense to families for loss or injury of a member, in contrast to the usual concentration on damage to vehicles, adds a needed element to the hazardous situation today, but it may result in duplication for persons already insured in respect of benefits for death or injury from general causes. While opinions vary at this point, it is strongly argued that insurance costs for the average car owner will increase, regardless of the fact that liability for damage up to $250—the most common category—will be removed from policies.

There is an obvious intention on the part of the government to ensure that persons responsible for accidents will be liable for up to $500 cash — covering their own and the other car — with no way in which they can protect themselves against this financial risk. This, of course, is calculated to create a decided deterrent to careless driving, but it will also mean in practice that the small debts courts will be continually crowded with claims, since this will be the only resort for drivers who feel that they have been wronged by another. Such a driver, however, will not be able to sue for higher damages.

There is thus the danger in this trail-breaking legislation that the legal rights of Canadians will be made to vary from province to province. A visitor to British Columbia will have rights to seek damages in court which are denied to residents. On the other hand, a British Columbian travelling outside the province will take on legal rights denied him at home.

Clearly there are some anomalies in the legislation which require study by the legal societies, the benchers and the civil liberties groups. It is perhaps inevitable that increasing regimentation and restriction must accompany the development of our ever-more crowded environment, but there should be limitations on the growing tendency to burden the innocent with the shortcomings of the guilty.

Canada on Canvas

FULL OF YEARS, HONORS AND accomplishment, Arthur Lismer has died at 83 — a legend in the Canadian art world during his life and one of the founding fathers of the Group of Seven who gave a distinctive character to painting in this country.

In the field of art education, Lismer has been called the most significant figure in Canada. Certainly his capabilities have been widely recognized in that area. But more particularly he lingers in the memory of an older generation for the graphic insight he brought to Canada's landscape and his vital choice of color.

He and colleagues of his group gave to Canadians a new outlook on sections of their country, often wild and remote. He and they caught a character, a spirit that was Canadian, and the art world here and beyond the continent recognized their achievement. Their "hunks of Canada" remain on canvas, impressive memorials to ability, a deep and honest form of patriotism, and a true feeling for their land.

Long Beach Park

SUPPORT FROM ALL QUARTers in the Legislature reflected public approval of the government bill to advance the creation of a seashore national park at Long Beach. This is an undertaking requiring a high degree of co-operation between federal and provincial authorities—and in this instance one which has encountered many delays and some disagreements.

While Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan indicated that the present bill is couched in general terms, mainly to facilitate land assembly, the fact that it has been introduced indicates a degree of inter-government harmony on Long Beach which is most desirable.

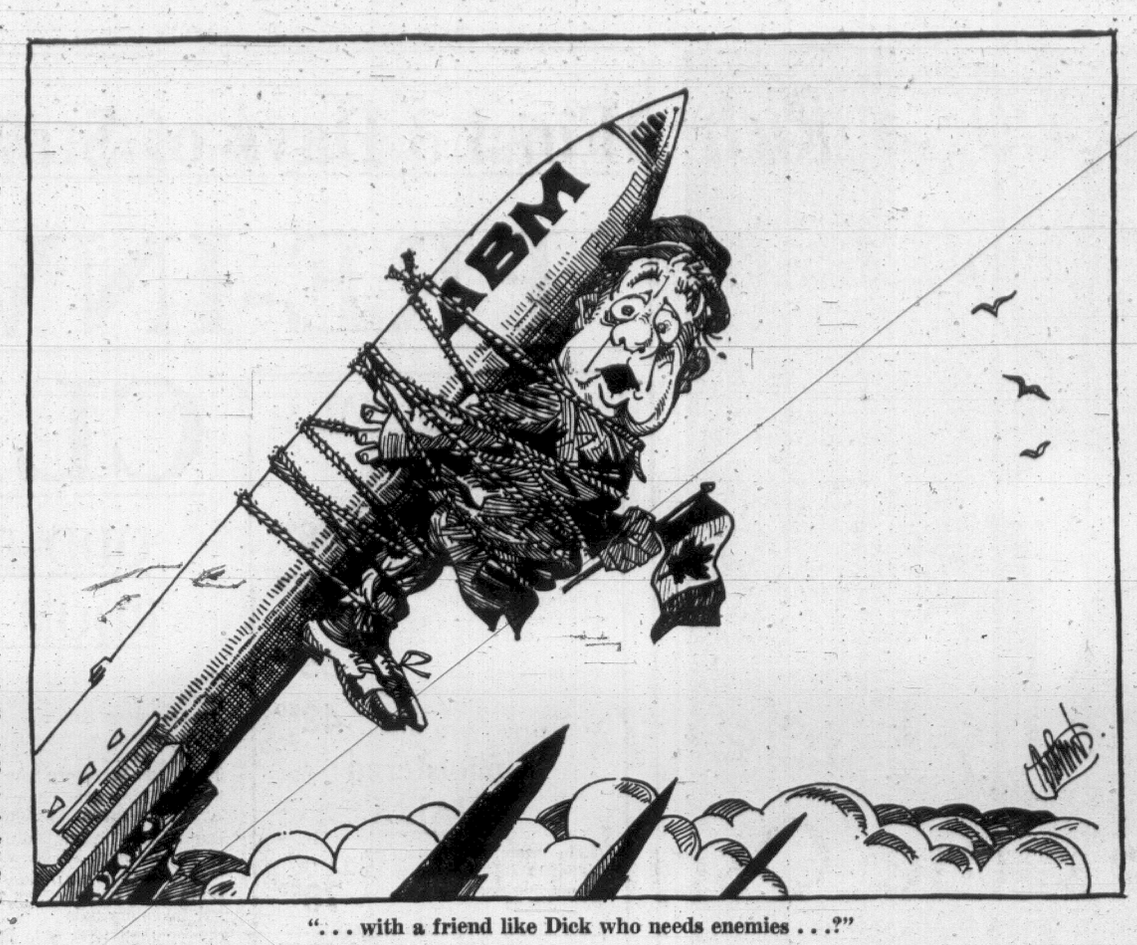

The national park will not emerge overnight at the scenic area on Vancouver Island's West Coast. Innumerable details remain to be attended to. But at long last there is movement on the project and for that recreationists should give their applause. If all goes well, the park will encompass much more than the Long Beach area.

The Sagging Lottery

DURING THE TWO YEARS OF its operation, New York's lottery to aid education has fallen far short of the $30-million monthly returns forecast for it. On average it has yielded $5 millions a month and in February produced less than $4 millions. The failure to meet expectations, moreover, has continued in spite of an increase in sales outlets—now 12,600 against the earlier 4,200.

The shortfall from the rosy prospects visualized by proponents is not limited to the New York experience. The revenue from Montreal's variant is a case in point. The lotteries, however they are named, do produce some funds for worthy purposes, but not what enthusiastic supporters anticipate.

The chance of winning in such operations is an odds-against proposition for the ticket purchaser—and the chance of the sponsor making what he hopes is not much better. New York, like other centres, has helped to prove the relative ineffectiveness of what so many optimists consider a sure-fire way to find money in great volume.

Re Auto Insurance

I see where Mr. H. Capozzi, M.L.A., is critical of the New Democratic Party's plan for government automobile insurance. The New Democratic Party members stood firm in their belief that compulsory auto insurance must be administered by a goverment agency, be it with the issuance of licence plates, drivers licences, gasoline tax, or a combination of all three.

Basically, auto insurance differs from life and fire insurance, in that a standard package will apply to every pedestrian, passenger, auto owner, and driver.

The Insurance and Safety Committee of the Department of Highways, in this past year insured, with full coverage and no deduetible, some 5,700 government-owner and operated vehicles at an average province-wide cost of $26.12.

We of the New Democratic Party, feel that these principles, practices, and economies, should be made available to all the people in this province.

In conclusion, we feel that it is morally wrong for a Legislature, in any democracy, to pass legislation compelling people to purchase insurance from some 188 private profit-motivated insurance companies. As legislators, we have an obligation to see that this service is made available, at the lowest cost from a non-profit agency.—W. L. Hartley, M.L.A., (Yale-Lillooet).

Subsidized

I regret that owing to shortage of space you were unable to print the whole of my letter on the matter of the Intermunicipal grants to the 'Y' and other organizations, and I hope you will be able to find room for this brief note in amplification.

The point I particularly wanted to emphasize was the the Y's membership of under 4,000 out of a population of 180,000 is being heavily subsidized by the general public, both through charitable donations and from money demanded by the Municipalities from taxpayers, (many of whom cannot afford the luxury of 'Y' membership) at the expense of deserving organizations providing help to all in need. This seems a most inequitable arrangement and I hope the Intermunicipal Committee will take another look at the proposal—J. A. Faulkner, 3422 Calumet.

CONSTITUTIONAL SHIELD — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Day Canada Blocked the Air

PARLIAMENT recently considered a stern warning to the United States against the installation of anti-missiles that might collide with Russian missiles over Canada's sovereign territory. But this momentous debate did not end in the spring of 1969. It continued, as historians will record, for the next ten years until the two nuclear giants of the world met in ultimate confrontation. On April 1, 1979, Premier Khrushchev, recalled to power in Russia, ordered a missile attack on the United States. President Nixon, in his third term of office, ordered instant retaliation. Suddenly, just as the nuclear buttons were being pressed in Moscow and Washington, a shattering and incredible event occurred. The intervention of the Turdeau government at Ottawa changed everything.

Hutchison

On that terrible day, 10:15 a.m., Moscow time, a secretary burst into Mr. Khrushchev's private room with a decoded telegram from Mitchell Sharp.

"Stop the missiles!" cried the secretary. "The Canadian government won't allow them in its air space!"

"Oh, no!" Mr. Khrushchev groaned. "Not that! Surely not that! Just when I've made all the arrangements to blow up humanity the Canadians sabotage the whole program. It's too much."

"Yes, heartbreaking," said Marshal Kakubovsky, minister of defence, "but we can't risk antagonizing a nation like Canada."

"If I weren't an atheist," muttered Leonid Brezhnev, "I'd say God save us all."

So the Russian missile attack was postponed at the last possible second.

Fateful Words

Meanwhile the appalling message from Ottawa had been laid before President Nixon. His dark face turned white and then green as he read the fateful words.

The secretary of state faced the crisis with a brave show of calm.

"We could take a chance on anything else," he said, "but not a protest from Canada."

"Besides," the attorney-general interjected, "the legal argument from Ottawa is unanswerable. As Mr. Trudeau observes, anti-missiles are forbidden in the sky above Canada by the Migratory Birds Treaty. We can't get around that."

At the same moment Mr. Khrushchev's legal advisers were interpreting the Canadian constitution to him. He listened patiently but his eyes were staring far away into the dismal sunset of Russian power.

"It might be possible," said the Kremlin's greatest constitutional authority, "to defy the federal government of Canada. But note, sir, section 92 of the British North America Act."

With trembling hands he laid the statute in front of Mr. Khrushchev.

Exclusive Control

"Clearly," he explained, "the Canadian constitution gives exclusive control of property and civil rights to the provincial governments. They will certainly prove in the Supreme Court that our missiles involve property and civil rights, to put it mildly. We dare not challenge Premier Bennett of British Columbia. And don't forget Mr. Smallwood, and especially Mr. Levesque. No doubt they're applying for an injunction against us already."

"Hopeless, all hopeless," Mr. Khrushchev whispered. "Our Communist revolution is finished. Those reckless Canadians have destroyed Marx, Lenin, Stalin and me. The pity of it."

His head fell on the desk and he sobbed like a child.

Simultaneously Mr. Nixon has grasped the meaning of an even worse disaster. Reading Mr. Trudeau's famous book, "Federalism and the French Canadians," the president, himself a great lawyer, saw at once that his government was in an impossible position.

"There's no use discussing it further," he said. "The Canadian prime minister has vetoed the United States constitution. Frankly, his case is watertight. Our most powerful anti-missiles couldn't penetrate it."

The president fought down his emotions and picked up his secret telephone to the Pentagon.

"Call off the attack," he said in a steady voice and swallowed three aspirin tablets without water. Then he walked alone in the White House rose garden until dawn.

But the crisis had not ended even yet. Shocked into a realization of their impotence, the American and Russian governments negotiated, before noon, a treaty of mutual defence against Canada.

Standing before the United Nations Assembly, arm in arm, the American president and the Russian dictator said in a joint statement: "At this solemn hour we pledge our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor to resist the threat of Canadian aggression, the naked menace to mankind from those imperialists and warmongers who are pleased to call themselves the True North, Strong and Free."

In Ottawa Mr. Trudeau took the news with outward indifference but his cabinet saw that the lines on his face had deepened and the carnation on his lapel had withered.

"One thing at least is settled," he said. "Our present constitution has proved itself adequate to prevent the last world war. We don't have to change a word or a comma in it. Forget the Bill of Rights. Dissolve Parliament. Pull down the blinds. I'm going to the Laurentians with my skis and my scuba diving suit."

As he walked through the door he turned back and added: "Canada has achieved supreme power in the world, the power of sheer reason. But remember, gentlemen, we must never abuse it."

FROM WASHINGTON — By JAMES RESTON

Evading the Big Issue of World Politics

THE control of military arms is undoubtedly the most important political question in the world today, for the arms race devours the money and influences all other questions of poverty, race, jobs and housing, both here and abroad. This was why there was such intense interest in what President Nixon would do about putting $6- or $7-billion into an antiballistic missile system. Would he see and face the presiding issue of world politics, or evade it? The answer is fairly clear; he evaded it.

Reston

He dealt with it politically and nationally, and within this frame, he was not only effective but brilliant. He did not reverse the Johnson Administration's decision to build an antiballistic missile system, but modified it. He moved it out of the cities where every missile site would have been a centre of student demonstrations, to military bases in Montana and North Dakota, where students and demonstrators are less visible and less popular.

In short, he confused and disarmed his critics with a mystifying clarification of his policy, but he didn't really deal with the major issue of disarmament. Like President Johnson, he dealt with the politics of the problem. For students of domestic politics, public relations, and bedside manners, President Nixon's press conference on the ABM was a fascinating preformance, but it was a tactic and not a policy, and it reduced the great issue of world arms control down to a national political controversy over the President's techniques.

Washington is an intensely personal and political city. At the beginning of a new Administration, it is more interested in the character and personality of the new President than in his policies. It watches him under pressure to see whether he will be bold enough to take a different course — to deal with the realities instead of the politics of life — or merely modify the old courses with a different style; and on the ABM issue, Mr. Nixon obviously followed the traditional pattern.

This has worried watchful people in the capital. They are confused about what to do about the ABM, and can see the argument for and against Mr. Nixon's compromise, but they are asking some fundamental questions.

What Next?

If the President decides to go along with the powers at the Pentagon and Congress who want a controversial ABM system, despite its cost, what will he do about the much more difficult question of making peace in Vietnam against the opposition of these same forces on Capitol Hill and at the Pentagon?

The argument of President Nixon's aides about this is very interesting. They say that the really major question for President Nixon is not the anti-ballistic missile but Vietnam. They say they are sorry that the ABM had to be Mr. Nixon's first big decision, for on the ABM he seems to be compromising, whereas on Vietnam, they insist, he will really be bold and will force a change of policy by the end of the year, which will stop the killing and end the war one way or the other.

This may be true. The public posture of amiability and compromise with everybody, which President Nixon has dramatized, may actually be a cover for a policy which will deal with the really big questions of arms control, peace in Vietnam, and a new policy and new priorities for the American cities. But very few people here see this as the future of the Nixon Administration at the present time.

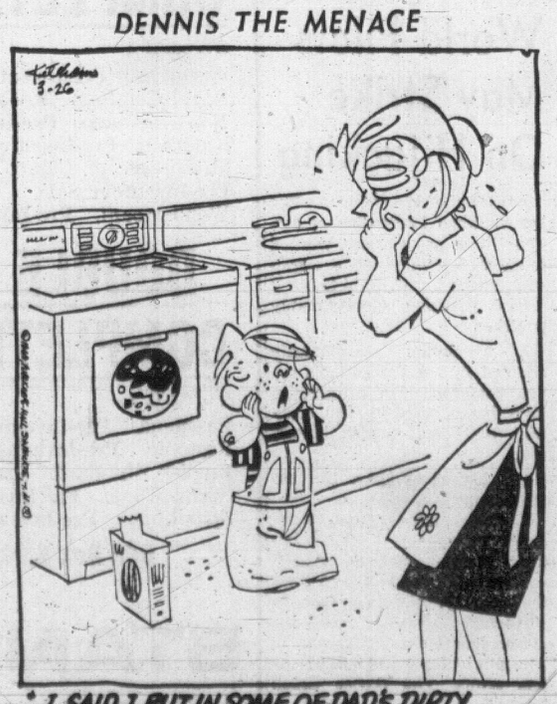

In Domestic Terms

The ABM decision has convinced most observers here that President Nixon is going to see the world in domestic political terms, that he is going to rely on good manners, good public relations and good luck to bring about fundamental changes at home and abroad; but the most thoughtful people here have their doubts.

They are not particularly concerned about Mr. Nixon's decision to go ahead in the country with the ABM, but they are concerned about him. For the really big questions in the world — arms control, ending the war, race and poverty — are radical and even desperate problems, requiring bold and radical policies, and they are worried because Mr. Nixon's first big decision indicated, not a bold or a philosophic approach to his problem, but a narrow, political, tactical and public relations view of the world.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times, March 26, 1909.

What is known as the "cow bylaw" occupied the city council for a short time last evening and gave rise to some amusement. It provides that no horses or cattle shall be driven through the streets unled or untethered, unless a permit is first obtained from the police chief, in which the route to be followed is to be set out.

Non-aesthetic

London Free Press

With London now in the midst of an apartment and office building boom, there is some fear the city's aesthetic quality may soon be determined by the exterior appearance of high-rise construction.

We say "fear" because of the lack of imagination which has gone into many of the square block, grey shapes beginning to change the face of the city . . .

Lack of controls on aesthetic quality, of course, is a problem not easily solved. The definition of what is ugly was recently the subject of a lengthy network television essay. There was no conclusion.

It is almost impossible to come up with a set of rules governing exterior appearance of apartment buildings . . .

Yet block apartments, which have a dramatic effect in shaping our cities, and our lives, have been largely immune to any balanced principle that a large building need not be unpleasant to look at. Hopefully, this will change.

For $200,000, a Rich Man's Ghetto in the Brave New World

By LAWRENCE FEINBERG

POTOMAC, Md. — A "maximum security" subdivision, with guard houses, an encircling wire mesh fence, and 67 homes costing at least $200,000 each, is being planned for construction next year here.

Plans call for hidden electronic sensors to be placed in shrubbery inside the fence.

The property consists of 167 acres and is eight miles from Washington. It is mortgaged to a Teamsters Union pension fund.

Preliminary plans for the new subdivision say the project will "provide maximum security for residents during this crime-ridden era."

"We are going to give people safety, something they can't get anyplace else," said C. Edward Nicholson, a lawyer for the developers.

"We will make it as burglary-proof, as tresspass-proof and as vandalism-proof as possible. Security is the thrust and theme of the development."

At the very edge of the property there will be a sturdy post-and-rail fence, similar to others that divide the rolling green fields of the Potomac horse country. The wire mesh screening is slated to go just inside, along the entire two-mile perimeter of the tract.

The plans show only two entrances for the entire subdivision, both flanked by guardhouses. One will be open 24 hours a day, Nicholson said. The other will be open only in daytime and early evening.

All non-residents will be stopped by guards who will phone the home owner being visited for permission to admit them. Residents will carry identification cards, Nicholson said.

School children will be picked up at their homes by a private mini-bus and brought to the guard station at the entrance, Nicholson said, where they will board a regular school bus.

According to the plans, the two-acre lots will front on streets called circles and named after literary figures, including Frost, Hemingway, Melville, Thurber, Thoreau and Whitman. One circle in a far corner is named for George Gershwin.

The present farmhouse and stables on the site will probably be retained for a club, whose membership will be restricted to property owners, Nicholson said.

Asked how much extra the security system would cost, Nicholson said, "anybody who can afford a $200,000 home shouldn't worry about a little item like that. I think J. P. Morgan once said, 'if you have to ask the price, you can't afford it.' "

Similar though less expensive fenced-in communities exist in New York and St. Louis. Nicholson said security at the Potomac subdivision, the first in this area, will be similar to that at Pebble Beach, near San Francisco.

"It's no reflection on the Montgomery County police," Nicholson said, "but there just aren't enough police to give protection. In this neighborhood your wife will be able to visit next door at 1 a.m., and you won't have to worry about it."

As Symphony Fades Away Up Comes the Oscillator

By PAUL HUME
The Washington Post

At the moment it does not seem possible or reasonable to talk about the state of "music." Rather, you have to say what kind of music you are talking about.

The symphony as a historical entity? Leonard Bernstein says, "When I was growing up there was still the last vestige of symphonic bloodstream flowing. There was still Copland's third symphony and Stravinsky and Shostakovich and Prokofieff.

"And then, suddenly, by the end of the war, it was all over. There is nothing left now, there is nobody to champion. The music director of a symphonic organization has nothing to do but guard the masterpieces of the past."

Historic Precedent

If that seems an extreme viewpoint, and it is, there are historic precedents for it not only in the written words but in the symphonies of Carl Nielsen and Hans Werner Henze.

Each of these men, though separated by an entire generation, wrote symphonies that depict with vivid tell-tale signs in structure and orchestral timbres the gradual dissolution of the form that lasted in glory from Haydn and Mozart through Bruckner and Mahler.

It is Bernstein's opinion that the symphonies of Mahler were at once the peak and the conclusion of the century and a half during which the symphony held an unchallenged supremacy.

So we come to the first of several major questions involved in a discussion of the present and immediate future state of music: has the form we call the symphony reached a point of saturation in which future usage will involve only more or less sterile repetitions of the past?

Or will the symphony, like other older forms in music, notably the concerto grosso, re-emerge in a later period in music as have the orchestral concertos of Bartok, Hindemith and Kodaly, to assert its particular genius in new ways?

What about opera, which Rudolf Bing says belongs in the museum he runs in New York City? Bernstein says Bing is wrong, that opera is where the new action is.

Certainly, as far as the Metropolitan is concerned, there is no new action, other than in staging some pieces.

Fresh Opera Ideas

But in this country and Europe, opera houses and experimental opera theatres of exciting new dimensions are producing new operas in which fresh ideas are thriving.

From month to month the reports from German opera houses alone include notices of new works and new composers. The Santa Fe Opera this summer will give the first U.S. performances of Krystof Penderecki's first opera, "The Devils of Loudon." A few weeks later it will be staged at the San Francisco Opera.

Roger Sessions, for all his 73 years, is still one of the most significant voices in American music. His opera "Montezuma," whose world premiere took place in Germany several seasons ago, is to have its initial American hearing in Boston late in May.

Thanks to the growing numbers of college, university and conservatory opera theatres in this country, new opera, often unconventional in ideas, is finding it easier to be heard.

How about the world of chamber music and the small, more unusual ensembles? What of choral writing, and songs—those things composers use to regard as the best of all places to begin writing music—and what of the new world, if not necessarily so brave, of electronic sounds.

These are all intertwined in what is by far the most active, yeasty, often violent arena in the entire music circus. Last summer's Inter-American Music Festival centred largely, though not exclusively, on music for small groups.

It is the trite cliche of the decade to observe, then, that we are going through a period of experimentation, often wild and frantic in its search for something new that will somehow attain validity.

Overshadowing all of music today are the new sounds produced from electronic oscillators, synthesizers, and other laboratory machinery.

Music will flourish, but in different forms

There is no cause to fear this new sound simply because it has a source new to music. It is not making newer sounds in music than Berlioz made, or Mahler, or Gesualdo or Monteverdi.

And, like them, it will be assimilated into the great music of the future, or, like other unsuccessful experiments, it will wither and disappear.

Electronic music is not the only developing factor in our midst. The business of writing for voices, either solo or in combination, might also seem to have passed out of the picture in the way Bernstein says the symphony has, when he says, "imagine one era producing Haydn, Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert, right up through Mahler and Sibelius . . . but it's over. It cannot be again."

Finally we come to the disputed region known as music of chance. It can be used rhythmically, melodically, and harmonically.

Turn Old Saw

A composer can turn the old Abraham Lincoln saw on it: you can have some of the players playing without notes some of the time; you can have some of the players playing without notes all of the time; you can have all of the players playing without notes some of the time; you can have all of the players playing without notes all of the time. You can even, page John Cage, have all of the players playing no notes at all all of the time.

Composers are giving players the right to choose which notes they prefer; when to play and when not to; whether to omit entire sections of a work one time, and to include them another. It has all become a big game: music of chance.

And it brings us to the final question of the day, and the one that is, as it has always been, the ultimate question: does it work?

No theory in music is worth a nickel unless it leads to music that takes its place in the continuing history of the art. We are living in a time when some of the most complex theories ever related to music have been devised and are being proposed as guides to young composers.

Music is neither sick, dying, nor dead. It will flourish as it always has, though it may become a different thing than it has been, and it may well not continue in our stuffy, dated concert halls and opera houses.

It should find larger audiences than it has yet known, and where might these come more easily than through electronic media? Those who scorn the audience for recordings in all forms are walking around blindfolded and not a little deaf.

As far as I'm concerned, the next new music I hear may be a turning point, a milestone. One is on the way.

Planet Birth Watched By Astronomers

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

Radio astronomers, gazing deep into the heavens, may for the first time be witnessing the stormy birth of one or more planets like the earth.

They have detected radio emissions from what appear to be one or more rings of dust and gas whirling at great speed around a central object.

A leading authority on the origin of the solar system believes that the central object may be a star in the process of formation and that the ring, or rings, may be condensing into new planets.

For more than three centuries scientists have speculated as to how the earth, sun and other bodies of the solar system were formed.

Descartes, in the 17th century, proposed that they condensed from a great dust cloud. Kant, a century later, elaborated the concept, using Newton's new gravity laws to explain what drew the dust together.

●

Today, there is general agreement that the primordial cloud of gas and dust was drawn together by its own gravity.

As it became tighter, its spin rate increased, causing it to flatten into a spinning disc. The central, dense core of this disc contracted further, becoming the sun.

A number of scientists believe the outer parts of this disc became segregated into fast-rotating rings.

The material within these concentric rings condensed into spinning discs that, in a small-scale repetition of the larger process, condensed into planets and moons.

●

Today, a leading authority on the origin of the solar system pointed out that if the newly-observed radio emissions do, in fact, represent the birth of one or more new planets, the process may proceed very rapidly, on an astronomical time scale.

In other words, it may be possible within a human lifetime to assemble the case history of such a birth.

The specialist was Dr. A. G. W. Cameron of the Belfer Graduate School of Science at Yeshiva University. He was commenting on a report in a recent issue of the journal Science on the observation of water vapor radio emissions from eight spots in the sky.

Most of these radio sources are thought to be the sites of new star formations. Five of them glow strongly with infrared light. All but one emit radio waves.

Why Map Out the Road To Destination Mediocrity?

By ART STOTT

The current issue of The B.C. Teacher says that the existing formula to finance education in this province provides a greater measure of equality in the amounts the various school districts will spend. "But," it adds, "the stringent restrictions placed on the rights of school boards to spend beyond the provincial average will inevitably mean that the government will control the level of spending in each school district. We believe that the long run result will be equalization at a standard of mediocrity."

Stott

The "long run result" depends on imponderables of the future—and The B.C. Teacher may be correct in its forecast. At the moment, however, some school districts enjoy revenue over that of others because the people in those districts approved higher taxation to meet the programs their trustees recommended.

★ ★ ★

As the act stands, school boards are curbed—but not prevented—from increasing their budgets substantially. The government says in effect to the trustees of any district: You can prepare your estimates for the year in a way to allow for revenue 10 per cent above last year. If you want more than 10 per cent, there are three avenues open to you. You can ask the councils in your district to approve a higher school budget. If the councils refuse, you can take your case to the ratepayers in a referendum. If they turn it down, you can apply to the cabinet, which may or may not let you go beyond the 10 per cent increase.

A school board satisfied with the basic program set by the provincial government can expect to budget within the 10 per cent increase limit. And if the government sets a basic program of high enough standard, the children should not suffer. However, if the board is not satisfied with the basic program and wants to provide something it considers better, the alternatives through which it may raise the extra money seem reasonable enough on the surface. Certainly the apparent government readiness to let the taxpayers decide through a referendum if they want to buy something different has some logic. Who should have the say if not the people who are going to foot the bill?

Unfortunately, it's not all that simple. The municipal taxpayers, the people of the community, may favor very highly a proposal from the school board to provide extras substantially above the basic program. But favorable as they may be, any number of them may object to the way the costs of those extras are thrust onto the shoulders of the home-owners and reject a referendum.

The approach through appeals to municipal councils, which might provide a passable detour, is barricaded by municipal council desire to use what funds can be collected from property-owners for other municipal services. The third avenue—application to the cabinet for authority to spend above 10 per cent in excess of the preceding year—is not a very clearly marked trail. In an election year, or to overcome some abnormality in regular financial needs of schools, it might be negotiable. There is no assurance that it would be.

So school boards who want to travel on a road where the spending limit is not restricted to 10 per cent above last year have three alternative routes from which to choose—though they cannot know when or if the bridges are out on any or all of them.

This, it seems to me, is the point The B.C. Teacher is making, with some pessimism.

After long years watching the game from the press box, I know that it takes money to produce a good educational performance. But I have never been able to shake what is probably considered a quaint, old-fashioned concept, that ultimately the performance depends on the individual. Money itself, in my opinion, does not necessarily create good teachers. How they light the candle, the torch, depends on something other than the padding in their pocketbooks. Either they have the spark or they don't. Money spent to improve techniques, to provide supplementary equipment can disguise some weaknesses. It can't provide the inspiration.

So it seems to me that the teachers—whose proclaimed objective is "Excellence in Instruction" should keep that aim in very clear focus. Whether or not British Columbia's educational system slumps to a standard of mediocrity will depend on the teachers, their ability and the way they translate slogans into actuality. Financially they have emerged from the submerged tenth, though education, like other good things, will never have as much money as some desire to create what they consider to be the ideal learning situations.

Most of my friends in the profession are too realistic to expect Utopia in the schools—and most of them won't chart their course on a roadmap headed toward mediocrity. It seems to me that, after a period of listening to a lot of self-denigration in education, they're ready to look again at the peaks. They may not reach them, but I'm confident they'll try.

CMA-Kaiser

Kaiser Coal, Ltd., consultant Earl L. Reynolds will address Vancouver Island members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at their annual meeting, April 9, in the Union Club, at 6 p.m.

His talk on Kaiser's British Columbia development will be illustrated by a land reclamation film.

Bank of Canada

Montreal lawyer Maurice Riel, 46, has been appointed a director of the Bank of Canada, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Monday.

Consumers' Gas

Consumers' Gas Co. said it has acquired 100 per cent of the shares of Underwater Gas Developers Ltd., a marine drilling company formerly owned by Consolidated West Petroleum Ltd. of Toronto.

Consumers bought 51 per cent of Underwater from Con West in 1967 for about $500,000.

The gas company has been drilling for gas off the shore of Lake Erie, and now is shipping gas from several underwater wells.

National-Can. Perm.

National Trust Co. Ltd. said Monday it will raise the interest rate payable on its non-chequing savings accounts to 6 per cent from 5.5 effective next Tuesday.

Interest rate will be calculated on the minimum monthly balance, and added to accounts April 30 and Oct. 31.

A spokesman for the Toronto-based Canada Permanent Trust Co. Ltd. said his company is also considering an upward increase in the rate.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Tax Time Simplified By Keeping Records

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, CA

(This is a service provided by The Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

Salesmen who earn commission income and incur expenses do have extra difficulties in preparing their tax returns.

Their problems mostly arise either from the basic question as to whether they are employees or self-employed, or from the proof and deductibility of their expenses.

Each salesman should clarify his relationship with the company he represents. If his earnings are commission only and if the company makes no deductions for Canada pension contributions he is probably a self-employed agent. If the company does deduct Canada pension contributions he is probably an employee even though he earns commission income only.

However, the accounting department of the company does not necessarily know the true relationship and may improperly deduct Canada pension contributions from persons who are really self-employed.

As a general rule it is more advantageous for tax purposes for a salesman to be self-employed because there are less restrictions as to the expenses he may deduct. He is then treated as having income from a business and may claim all legitimate expenses incurred by him to earn that business income.

The employee salesman usually receives a basic salary plus commission and the amount of his allowable expenses is restricted to the total of his commission. If he incurs excess expenses, even though they are properly allowable by nature of the expense, the excess amount is not allowed and cannot be used to reduce his income below the basic salary

An employee salesman may claim depreciation on his automobile to the extent it is used for business driving but he is not allowed to claim depreciation on any other class of assets he may use for his business. For example, where a salesman uses his own office equipment such as a desk and filing cabinets he may not claim any depreciation on these if he is an employee but he may claim 20 per cent of the depreciated cost if he is self-employed.

This may seem unfair but it is the way the Income Tax Act is written and is by no means the only unfair application of taxation.

Salesmen often receive tax reassessments to disallow expenses because they are unreasonable and unsupported with vouchers. The most common areas of dispute are travel and sales promotion expenses.

Automobile expenses and depreciation are allowable in the proportion of business driving to personal driving but few people keep actual mileage records and this proportion is often little better than a rough guess. If the salesman makes the guess he is likely to lean heavily towards more business driving. The tax assessor is likely to ask the sticky questions as to how far it is from the taxpayer's home to his business, which is personal driving, and how often he used his business car for weekend trips and vacations.

The taxpayer who does keep a reasonable record of his expenses usually has little trouble with the tax assessor and can uually prove his claim for a greater amount than the person who has no proper records and makes up a rough estimate at the end of the year.

Atlas Chain Sale No Help To Firm's Shareholders

Sale of Atlas Chain Co. plant assets to a Burnaby-based firm will not benefit shareholders, according to a spokesman for the trustee handling windup of the former Esquimalt company.

W. E. Scythes, assistant manager of Canada Trust-Huron and Erie, said first claim on realization of any assets would be that of debenture holders. There is also the senior claim on assets by the Bank of Montreal.

Windsor Machine Co. Ltd., which makes saw bars, sprockets and other power saw parts, bought the Atlas equipment and machinery, effective March 31 and hopes to re-open the plant to make power saw chain early in April. An effort was to be made to rehire some of the expert staff who lost their Atlas jobs when the company folded in December.

The purchase does not involve Atlas saw chain patents, over which there is litigation.

Scythes did not know the value of the transaction or the extent to which debt would be reduced, pending final settlement.

Canadians Urged to Demand Press Freedom Or Accept Profiteering, Monopoly, Waste

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Claude Ryan, publisher of Montreal Le Devoir, says freedom of the press, essential to a healthy democracy, will be endangered until the government prevents press control by monopolies more interested in profits than journalism.

Mr. Ryan, speaking at a testimonial dinner Saturday, said that "as long as there are no special laws governing press enterprises we will be in danger of losing a freedom which was only acquired after years of work."

He said there are three choices for a newspaper faced with rising costs and reader demands—partial or complete regrouping to permit an increase in resources without a corresponding rise in operating costs; giving up to monopolists; or wasting away.

He called attention to the public's responsibility to demand a responsible and independent press. Otherwise, people will wake up one day to find the information they receive controlled by "guys from New York or Chicago or Los Angeles."

VEERING AND SNEERING

Snarling ball-carrier attempting to skirt scrum is UCLA's Dave Olsen. Scrum half from California was consistently stopped by University of Victoria players Dave Slater (white sweater, centre) and Neil Bonnell (right) in first half of Tuesday's inter-collegiate rugby exhibition at Centennial Stadium. But Olsen and UCLA mates enjoyed the greater success in second half, overcoming 9-0 deficit to win 22-9. It was only the third loss of season for the Vikings.—(Times photo by Bill Halkett)

Rugged Grind Hinders Vikings

By STEVE HUME

UCLA will officially get credit for its 22-9 rugby victory over University of Victoria Vikings at Centennial Stadium Tuesday, but some honor could probably go to Oak Bay Wanderers and Vancouver Norwests.

Thanks to Oak Bay's efforts in the city final Saturday, and Norwests' thrashing of the Crimson Tide Sunday, the Vikings were injury-riddled, exhausted and hurting by the time they took the field against powerful UCLA.

In spite of injuries that sidelined three key men and left others in the "walking wounded" category, the Uvic squad put up a surprisingly strong fight for their third game in four days.

Team captain Al Foster was out with a ligament injury, fullback Jim Wenman did not dress because of a leg injury, nor did outstanding winger Dave Leonard.

Yet, early in the game, the Viking pack asserted itself with authority against the big, mobile American forwards, and the backfield stopped UCLA's running attack cold.

The visitors settled in for a kicking game during the opening minutes, and virtually ignored their running backs for most of the match. That strategy set much of the tone for the rest of the game with all Uvic's points and 16 of UCLA's coming from kicks.

Ted Hardy, brought up from the second division Norsemen to replace Wenman at fullback rolled the Vikings to a 9-0 lead half-way through the first period on penalty kicks from 25, 26 and 15 yards.

And led by driving play in the loose from wing-forwards Van Pratt and Neil Bonnell and props Jim Henderson and Mick Eckherdt, the Vikings showed more tactical soundness than the Americans.

The UCLA squad played scrambly "on-the-ball" rugby that lacked cohesiveness or strategy, and only their extremely rugged tackling on already bruised Vikings prevented more scoring against them.

Tenacity in UCLA's Field Pursuit

Time and again fly-half Bob Thrussel went to the boot instead of his three-line, and very often at the expense of positional play among his backs and forwards.

But the one thing the visitors did well besides tackle was mount a tenacious up-field pursuit. At first the Vikings moved the ball well in the face of pressure from UCLA forwards, but eventually they began to lag as the previous days' wear and tear began to tell.

That was all UCLA's fine kicker Jim Sayer needed, and once the Uvic squad was in their own end he booted a pair of 15 and 25-yard penalties to cut the lead to 9-6 before the half.

During the second period the Vikings exhaustion became evident.

Forwards were just a fraction too slow moving onto the ball, scrum-half Dave Slater, who put in a fine game despite playing with injury, was just a fraction slow picking up and clearing to his backs.

Those were the fractions that made the difference, and as the edge in play shifted to UCLA, the slim 9-6 lead waned.

Sayer boomed out another penalty kick to even the score, and then tallied still another for a 12-9 lead, while the Vikings slowly ran out of steam.

But not all the Uvic players lagged, Dave Hutchings, Reg Hoole and Gary Johnston sparked the backfield into sporadic attacks that ran right through the defenders' three-line when they got into high gear.

Unfortunately they weren't in high gear often enough.

Midway through the second period the Americans struck for the first of two converted trys when John Erguiga plunged into the end zone after a five-yard scrum. Sayer converted.

Minutes later they capitalized on missed Viking assignments with an overlap following some sloppy play in the loose that sent centre Dave Stephenson in for another try converted by Sayer.

That should have been it for the weary, battered Uvic squad, instead it fired them up and gave the visitors a taste of how they play rugby on a good day.

The loss, at least, came at the right time psychologically. It was only the third loss of the season for the Vikings and it should get them in the right frame of mind for provincial championship action at the weekend against the Kats in Vancouver.

UCLA: Scrum—Bruce Jorgensen, Rich Verry, Vic Lepisto, Pete Nestinglen, John Erguiaga, Steve Stanley, Mike Coyle, Dennis Murphy; Backs—Tim Desmond, Rich Spindler, Mike Garrett, Dave Stephenson, Jim Sayer, Bob Thrussel, Dave Olson.

FOGGY BELL CLANGS IN LINCOLNSHIRE TEST

DONCASTER, England (AP)—Foggy Bell today won the one-mile Lincolnshire handicap over a soft turf course—the first horse race of the season involving the Irish sweepstakes.

Saratoga Skiddy came second, Kamundu third and Owen Anthony fourth.

Foggy Bell, ridden by Sandy Barclay, moved into a challgening position at the halfway mark, took the lead 1½ furlongs from home and won by about two lengths.

The win was worth only £6,586 (about $17,237) to winning British owner John Forrester—but that was incidental to the vast interest in more than 100 countries generated by the Irish sweepstakes.

Foggy Bell, a four-year-old bay colt by Golden Vision out of Milium, started at betting odds of 20 to 1. Saratoga Skiddy was 8 to 1, Kamundu 100 to 8 and Owen Anthony 15 to 1.

Twenty-five forses contested the race on a soft track with Chebs Lad the favorite at 9 to 2. Milesius was pulled out of the race at the last minute apparently because of lameness.

Canucks Second, Third a Tossup

By the Canadian Press

With the Western Hockey League in its final week of regular play the only question mark remaining is: Who's in third?

Vancouver Canucks clinched second place Tuesday night at Vancouver with a 6-2 victory over the third-place Gulls of San Diego But the Gulls are only three points ahead of the Seattle Totems, who have four games left to San Diego's two.

In the only other game Tuesday, Denver Spurs pulled themselves out of the cellar with a 4-2 win over Phoenix at Denver, leaving the Arizonans with sole possession of last place.

Veteran Andy Bathgate scored two goals to lead the Vancouver attack. His first broke a 1-1 tie midway through the second period and his second early in the final stanza gave the Canucks a lead they never relinquished.

POWER-PLAY SHOT

Pat Hannigan scored the first Vancouver goal with 4:21 gone in the second period and Len Ronson tied it for the Gulls four minutes later. After Bathgate's pair, the Canucks got goals by Murray Hall and Germain Gagnon before John MacMillan cashed in on a power play for the final San Diego tally. Duke Harris also score for Vancouver.

Phoenix took the lead late the opening period on a goal by Aut Erickson but lost it with 7:31 gone in the second period when Allan Johnson scored his 23rd of the season for Denver.

Wilf Martin and Gordy Vejprava made it 3-1 Spurs before Bob Charlebois brought the Roadrunners within one with 11 minutes to play. Randy Miller scored the final Denver goal.

The two teams meet tonight at Phoenix, while league-leading Portland hosts Seattle.

Jones Nears 400 Mark

SEATTLE (AP) — Portland centre Art Jones can reach a major milestone this week. His next goal will be the 400th of his Western Hockey League career and will make him only the second person to hit that mark in the circuit.

Through the end of the past week, Jones had 37 goals and 76 assists for 113 points. He led the field in assists but was in sixth place in goals.

Tops in the goal department was teammate Bill Saunders with 51. Saunders has 58 assists.

Seattle defenceman John Hanna was tabbed as "player-of-the-week." His 25th goal of the season equalled the goal-scoring record for defencemen set by Doug Barkley for Calgary during the 1961-62 season.

Tom Polanic of Phoenix moved ahead of Connie Madigan of Portland as the most-penalized player in the league with 175 minutes in the penalty box.

Tolos Triumphs In Grapple Card

John Tolos defeated Steve Bolus in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena Tuesday night.

In other bouts, Dutch Savage outgrappled John Kosas, B-B Shields downed Tony Orford and Angelo Mosca won over Roy McClarty.

JUNIOR SERIES . . . RESUMES TONIGHT

Vital Test for Cougars

Victoria Cougars and Lethbridge Sugar Kings meet in round No. 3 of their interprovincial junior hockey playoff tonight at Memorial Arena.

And it's a round, declared Cougar coach Doug Anderson, Victoria "must win."

The Don MacLean-coached Kings, who arrived in Victoria Tuesday afternoon, lead the best-of-seven Western Canada quarter-final series 2-0 on the strength of 4-2 and 6-5 (in overtime) victories in Lethbridge.

Neither McLean nor Anderson contemplated any startling lineup changes. McLean said he plans to "go along with the same three lines" that carried Lethbridge to its 2-0 advantage.

Anderson said he plans "some minor adjustments" on attack.

The fourth game is scheduled for Friday and a fifth, if necessary, will be played in the Arena on Saturday night.

Game time tonight is 8:30.

Defence Has Sparkle But Nats' Attack Dull

STOCKHOLM (CP) — Goalie Ken Dryden of Toronto has made the switch from Ivy League campuses to world hockey in one successful launching.

He arrived on the world championship scene from Cornell University with credentials stacked high and the pros hot after him. In his first start for the Canadian national team he shut out the United States 1-0 Tuesday night.

If anything tarnished his triumph, it was the inept shooting of the Canadian squad, which must be the lowest scoring team Canada ever has sent to a world tournament.

Morris Mott provided the Canadian goal, his first of the tournament and only Canada's 16th in seven games.

"Outside of Dryden, who deserved his shutout, only Roger Bourbonnais and Gerry Pinder played well," said assistant coach Jack Bownass. "The rest were just plain bad from beginning to end."

The Czechs kept even with Russia Tuesday, winning over Finland 4-2 on a pair of goals by centre Jaroslav Jirik, who'll be playing next season with St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League.

Bownass held his second news conference of the tournament Tuesday night in place of coach Jackie McLeod and noted that his first was after Canada's 5-0 victory over the U.S. March 20.

"That was a bad game also," Bownass said.

Ken Supplies Psychological Lift

Bownass indicated both Montreal and Toronto of the NHL are after Dryden, a six-foot-three 205-pounder who has played against the top U.S. college teams in North America.

"He played very well, but he didn't have a great deal of work to do," Bownass said.

Just the same, "it gave us a psychological advantage having him in there."

Dryden turned in 25 saves and was particularly effective in the closing minutes when the U.S. tried desperately to gain a tie and pulled out goalie Mike Curran.

Player-coach John Mayasich of the U.S. team didn't mince words in his praise of Curran, who stopped 43 shots.

Mayasich is general manager of Green Bay, Wis., in the U.S. Hockey League, and Curran is the regular Green Bay goalie.

Mayasich called Curran the best goalie in the tournament. "Without wishing to belittle our defenders, Curran doesn't get much help," Mayasich said. "Other goalies have less to do on their own. Curran is doing a fantastic job."

Mike has made a total of 261 saves in seven games and allowed 48 goals.

He is one of the shortest players in the tournament at five-foot-eight while Dryden is the tallest.

The last-place Americans have lost all seven games, something no other U.S. club has done in world championships. Also, it was the 15th straight loss to Canada in world competition since the end of the Second World War.

'Best College Goalie in History'

Dryden's three-year string of successes with Cornell's primarily Canadian team made him a legend in U.S. college hockey circles. Opposition coaches call him "the best college goalie in history."

His remarkable record of allowing a little more than a goal a game brought him all-star honors three years running.

The 24-year-old senior flew to Stockholm midway in the tourney after completing the U.S. college season.

Dryden took over the backup position left open when Steve Rexe of Peterborough, Ont., was hurt in practice and forced to drop out of the tournament.

The Czechs are taking no chances blowing a chance for the gold. Tuesday, when Finland went ahead 2-0 on goals by Matti Keinonen and Esa Isaakson, No. 1 goalie Vladimir Dzurila was quickly replaced by Miroslav Lacky.

The Czechs rallied to tie it 2-2 before the period ended on Jirik's first goal and another by Jiri Holik. Vaclav Nedomansky got the third in the second period and Jirik completed the scoring in the third.

Finland's Urpo Ylonen totalled 24 saves and Dzurila and Lacky 21.

The Czechs got three of six penalties and replaced Canada as the most penalized country with 81 minutes. Canada got five of 10 penalties and has 80 minutes.

JEAN PRONOVOST

He Has Name And Know-How

By the Canadian Press

Marcel Pronovost's career is just about over, but his younger brother Jean could represent the family in the National Hockey League for many years yet.

Marcel, a 38-year-old defenceman with 19 years service in the NHL, has seen limited action with Toronto Maple Leafs this season and may become a player-coach in the minors next season.

But Jean, a 23-year-old right winger, has been one of the few members of Pittsburgh Penguins to gain any recognition this season.

The younger Pronovost, a native of Shawinigan Falls, Que., scored two third-period goals Tuesday night to lead the Penguins to a 3-1 victory against Minnesota North Stars in the only scheduled NHL game.

The victory moved the Penguins, last in the Western Division, to within four points of fifth-place Minnesota. The North Stars have two games remaining and the Penguins three as both teams attempt to avoid the cellar.

GRANT SCORES 33RD

Danny Grant put Minnesota into a 1-0 lead midway through the second period with his 33rd goal of the season, tying Norm Ferguson of Oakland as the top goal-scoring rookie.

The modern record for most goals in a season by a rookie was held by Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal Canadiens with 30 in 1951-52.

Awards Finalists Named

Selection committee members now only have to choose between three men, three women and three teams for honors to be presented at the Sports Celebrity banquet Tuesday at Empress Hotel.

Finalists for the top individual and team awards were named Tuesday

Mary Coutts, winner of the women's award last year, might share in another title this time.

Victoria Maplettes, finalists for the "team of the year" award, were sparked by Mrs. Coutts to a second successive Canadian senior women's basketball championship.

★ ★ ★

Chew Excavating Hornets and Victoria Cougars, two junior men's clubs, complete the list of possible choices.

Hornets trampled undefeated to the Vancouver Island Football League championship last year before grabbing the provincial crown.

Cougars, last place in the B.C. Junior Hockey League in their inaugural season last year, pulled all stops on the way to league and playoff championships this year.

Both Cougars and Hornets have an interest in one of the finalists for the men's title—Ron Grahame.

★ ★ ★

Grahame was captain and standout linebacker for Hornets while starting off on the trail to win the hockey league's goaltending honors and all-star post with Cougars.

Two Canadian junior champions — gymnast Rick Johnson and skater Paul Fisher are also in the race.

Johnson captured the Canadian title last summer and had a berth on the national squad which visited Cuba.

Fisher, who specializes in freeskating, staged magnificent comebacks to win both the B.C. senior men's and Canadian junior men's titles.

★ ★ ★

Track starlettes Ann Langdale and Barb Dallimore plus volleyballer Anne Jeffrey are finalists for the women's title. Miss Langdale overturned the Canadian juvenile 400-metre record and placed second in the 200-metre at the Canadian track and field championships.

Hurdler Miss Dallimore set a Canadian outdoor mark and indoor record since last summer while Miss Jeffrey was a member of the national volleyball squad.

Tickets are going fast for the banquet and may be obtained from area arenas, Saanich Kiwanis members and Dorman's Men's Wear.

BILLY DEA SIDELINED

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins have recalled right winger Ron Snell from their Amarillo, Tex., farm team to replace Billy Dea, who is out for the rest of the National Hockey League season with a knee injury.

MARY COWAN . . . HOPES FOR CANADIAN FIRST

Housewife Hopes to Race at Sandown

Mary Cowan, who wants to be Canada's first woman jockey, has been issued a probationary licence to race thoroughbreds and the pert, 32-year-old housewife hopes to be in silks early next month.

Mrs. Cowan hopes to ride opening day at Sandown Park, April 5.

The probationary licence, issued by the British Columbia racing commission, doesn't permit her to actually enter a race, but it is a start.

"It means the stewards have to find out how good she is," says Jack Diamond, of Vancouver, co-president of the B.C. Jockey Club.

"Maybe tomorrow, or the next day, she'll be breaking two-year-olds from the gate and the starter will be checking. He'll report to the stewards when he gives the okay.

"I'm sure she'll pass, she's very capable."

Mrs. Cowan, who lives in a trailer with her husband Charley at the Shedrow in Vancouver's Exhibition Park, has been riding in horse shows since she was nine.

The Cownas own three thoroughbreds.

Born in Winnipeg, Mrs. Cowan raced in "powder puff derbies"—races for women—at Assiniboia Downs. She also has been galloping thoroughbreds for 12 years.

"I'm all in favor of girl jockeys," says Diamond. "If it's good enough for Aqueduct (New York) and Santa Anita (California), then it's good enough for us."

Although Mrs. Cowan is unique in Canada, she is following in the footsteps of some U.S. women. Penny Ann Early has raced at Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky., and Barbara Jo Rubin is riding at Pimlico in Baltimore and Waterford Park in West Virginia.

The break from the starting gate and her stamina will be the major tests, says her husband. The Cowans hope she'll be able to ride at Sandown, where most of the races in the spring are short.

At five-foot-six and 120 pounds, she anticipates no trouble in making weight. She believes she will be able to get down to 115 or 112 with no trouble.

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Let's Chit and Chat a While . . .

Not that it matters, but one of the other benefits of being a golf professional is that you don't have to give away any strokes to par . . . Amateurs do, and it's interesting to note that both Hal Jacobsen of Glen Meadows and Uplands' Bob Hunt both must concede strokes to par when the gang gets around to figuring out net results in next Sunday's qualifying rounds for the Times Vancouver Island Open match-play tournament . . . The pros in the field at Gorge Vale next Sunday will be better off . . . Think about it . . .

Monday was meeting night in all corners of our community . . . Uplands and Oak Bay directors met for monthly meetings in their favorite clubhouses . . . The Island's pros got together, as did the District Committee . . . And Bill and Ernie Brown (an unrelated pair) came over from Vancouver to break bread with the ladies . . . The Browns also took time to "discuss" the fact that the Canadian Ladies' Professional Championship will be played at Shaughnessy Sept. 4-7 . . . With $30,000 in prize money offered, it will be the richest women's tournament ever played in Canada, and the third richest on the tour this year . . . It'll be a good time to catch Carol Mann, Kathy Whitworth, Sandra Post et all in action . . . For males who can stand embarrassment, the pro-am portion of the tournament (on Sept. 4) will include two men players . . .

Pat Fletcher, the ex-Victorian now toiling in Montreal and a past-president of the CPGA, wraps up a lengthy return to his hometown this week . . . He's looking forward to the day he can return "permanently" and recently purchased a home in the Cadboro Bay area . . . Moe Hays, Bob Kidd's assistant at Penticton, came around during the junior hockey playoffs and expressed amazement at the soaring interest in the Penticton Open . . . The dates are July 17-19 but Penticton officials have already drawn "a flock" of entries from the Victoria and Vancouver areas . . . Speaking of flocks, Leo Derman is scheduled to fly out of hospital this week . . . Gorge Vale's secretary underwent minor surgery . . .

Oak Bay's Jim Pomeroy and Vaughan Trapp defended the district's open buttons by defeating Frank Scroggs and Claude Heggie, the challengers from Uplands, on the 18th at Colwood Sunday . . . In competition at Uplands, Rollie Ferris and Jim Bramley teamed up for a net 68 to capture the R. F. Williams Trophy . . . Gross winners in the twoball event were Bob Moss and Wally Jeanes, with a gross 75 . . . Brothers Cec and Robby Ferguson packed off the Rogers greensome prize at Gorge, scoring 73-3½—69½ . . . Lex Sutcliffe and Gary Small, 78-8—70, were the low gross winners . . .

Cedar Hill's spring opening honors went to Kurt Lampert, 68-9—59 . . . Gerry Smith captured low gross honors with a 67 . . . Also at Cedar Hill, Tom Mason (on the 18th) and Neil McCallum (on the sixth) checked in with aces in recent days . . . Nanaimo-reared Ron Hungle has replaced John Morgan as one of Paul Trapp's assistants in the Oak Bay pro shop . . .

Uplands' second annual Easter tournament (April 5-6) still has a limited number of openings for Uplands members . . . Also mailed is a reminder that the second annual "Crocus" tournament is set for April 26 at Qualicum Beach . . . Golfers teeing off in the Island Open Sunday will be reminded that the continuous putting regulation has been waived . . . One change is in the offing for the annual Empress Hotel tournament . . . In previous years, the women played Uplands while the men controlled Oak Bay . . . Victoria club will host both events this year . . . The Empress event comes up April 14-19 . . .

Vancouver Canucks' Andy Bathgate has teamed up with New York Ranger stars Vic Hadfield and Harry Howell in purchasing a farm near Burlington, Ont. . . . The hockey players plan to convert it into a golf course . . . Canada's national parks department is feeling the price pinch . . . golf fees have been increased at all seven courses maintained by the National Parks Board . . .

Qualifying Field Ready For Times Open Chase

The defending champion, three other former winners, a pair of plus-handicap players and a crop of talented young amateurs. . . .

They make up, in part, the list of prominent challengers who will tee off next Sunday in the annual Times Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship.

The six-week scramble for The Daily Times Trophy begins with the 18-hole qualifying round at Gorge Vale. The low 32 gross scorers and an additional 32 low net marksmen then square off for match-play battles to be staged, in succession, at Victoria, Glen Meadows, Colwood, Gorge and Uplands.

The 36-hole finals for the open title and the Hugh Francis (handicap) Trophy will be played at Uplands on May 4.

Heading the field of 162 entered is Oak Bay professional Vaughan Trapp. Winner of The Times Trophy the past two years, Trapp will be first off the tee.

Trapp was granted the "hurry-up" start in order to catch a noon flight to Montreal where he will attend a CPGA business school.

In addition to Trapp, the field includes former champions Laurie Carroll, Norman Boden and Bill McColl. Also showing up in the starting field are a pair of amateurs who can boast of "plus" handicaps. They are Glen Meadows southpaw Hal Jacobsen (plus two) and Uplands' Bob Hunt (plus one).

Returning for another try at the coveted tee prize are Al MacLeod of Gorge Vale and Colwood pro Bill Court, both of whom reached the finals in past years.

The field also includes an impressive array of talented youngsters such as Dave Mick and Cec Ferguson of Gorge Vale. Mick was the medallist in the B.C. Amateur last summer while Ferguson reached the semifinals.

Starting times for Sunday's qualifying round are published on the right.

New League Ready to Roll

The Greater Victoria Roller Hockey League is set to go.

Enough registrations were gathered to form four teams this week. But more are still required.

Another meeting has been called for next Monday at 7:30 p.m in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

All boys aged 18 and over are eligible and there is a pressing need for both coaches and referees. Further information is available by telephoning Barry Lee at 382-2946.

Rookie Bullet Most Valuable

NEW YORK (AP) — Wes Unseld, the rookie from Louisville who helped Baltimore Bullets from last place in 1968 to the Eastern Division title this season, has been named the most valuable player in the National Basketball Association.

Unseld, first rookie to win since Wilt Chamberlain in 1960, easily beat out Willis Reed of New York Knicks, 310 points to 137, in the balloting among NBA players.

Unseld, a 6-foot-7, 245 pound centre, averaged 14 points and 18 rebounds a game.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Back in "Bowler-of-the-Week" winners' list after two-season absence is Bruce Logie, capturing men's tenpin award in 23rd of 27-week long Times-sponsored contest. Bruce scattered pins for 219-192-245—656 series in Victoria Seniors League at Mayfair Lanes.

Als' Quarter Back in Fold

MONTREAL (CP) — Quarterback Carroll Williams has signed his contract for the coming season with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, the club announced today.

A graduate of Xavier University in Cincinnati, Williams is starting his third season with the club. He is 24.

Williams has improved greatly since his rookie year in 1967 when he averaged 5.2 yards on each carry. Last season he upped that average to 7.2 yards, the second highest in the four-team EFC.

Former Victoria Aces Enjoy Shuttle Success

TORONTO (CP) — As the six courts at the Boulevard Club sat in darkness Tuesday night, officials of the Canadian badminton closed championships told an amusing tale about a small district tournament in India which once ran continuously for 72 hours at a one-court club.

It seems the Indian tournament had attracted 64 players in each of the men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles for a weekend competition. To get the matches completed, they played nonstop, sleeping in shifts on the hardwood floors surrounding the court.

Canadian officials, however, did not propose anything so drastic to squeeze Tuesday's 21 postponed men's and women's doubles matches into an already-tight schedule after a power failure halted play.

The change in the draw brought one default and moved defending men's doubles champions Jamie Paulson and Yves Pare of Montreal into the quarter-finals on the strength of their 15-1, 15-3 victory over Dell and John Rogers of Halifax in the opening round.

HAD LITTLE TROUBLE

Paulson, seeded second and 1968 closed singles champion, had little trouble advancing to the quarters in his bid for two individual titles in a row, whipping Rolf Paterson of Vancouver 15-5, 15-6.

Top-ranked Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, open singles champion, goes against Pare after beating Vic Conley, also of Vancouver, 15-6, 15-7 in the second round.

And third-seeded Wayne MacDonnell of Vancouver, who won six consecutive closed singles titles between 1962 and 1967, registered the most one-sided win of the day, blanking Duncan Irwin of Winnipeg, 15-0, 15-0.

Rollick's wife, Judi, also gained a berth in the quarter-finals, with an 11-4, 11-2 victory over Ontario junior champion Jennifer Dakin of Oakville.

Meanwhile, Sherri Boyse of Calgary, who won three titles at the national juniors Monday, got by Pat Moody of Montreal, 6-11, 11-3, 11-9 to face defending champion Sharon Whittaker of Vancouver.

Miss Whittaker crushed Penny Vincent of Toronto, 11-1 while Dorothy Tinline, also of Toronto, got by Yolande Denis of Montreal, 11-5, 11-5.

Allison Daysmith of Vancouver and Miss Whittaker are favored to win the women's doubles title, won last year by Mrs. Moody and Jean Miller.

Mrs. Rollick, Miss Daysmith and Miss Whittaker all are former Victorians.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

For the past couple of weeks, I've been hoping that the moderator of the United Church of Canada was only kidding when he suggested that parents should support their early-wedded young for 10 years or even longer after they leave the nest.

But just the other evening, Rev. John Baird McClure chose to enlarge his spine-chilling view on television. Mom and Dad, this worthy but deluded churchman insisted, should be willing to forego a new luxury car in order to help the young marrieds complete their education.

At this point, let us look in on a representative couple who undertook to translate the moderator's theory into fact.

The time is nine years from now, and the scene is the old plantation. It could use a new roof and a coat of paint. On the potholed drive sits what looks like a pile of junk. As we approach, it takes the shape of a car. Nobody in his right mind would call it a luxury model.

Working on it is a father we'll call Joe. He looks up as a neat little sports job turns in off the street.

A young man gets out. He is casually dressed, as university students tend to be, and there's a touch of grey in his beard.

"Y'know, Dad," he says, "it's about time you got a new heap."

"One of these years," Joe says in a vague sort of way. "What is it this time, Son?"

"I guess you forgot. It's allowance day."

★

Joe straightens from his haywiring, and brushes off his patched knees. Reluctantly, he reaches for the ballpoint and cheque book handy in his hip pocket.

"Your mother and I grow no younger," he says. "Think maybe you and Joyce will be able to make it on your own pretty soon?"

His son gives him a reproachful glance. "Dad, it isn't even 10 years yet, and you know what the moderator said. . . ."

"Yes, yes, of course. It's just that I don't know how much longer I can stand the moonlighting, Son. The fellows at the shop are starting to call me Pokey Joe. I drop things and fall asleep on my feet. Then there's your mother. Her washing maching broke down again, and she needs new glasses."

He sighs. "Here you are. Try to stretch it a little, eh?"

Son departs. Joe mooches down to the house. Inside, his wife, Agnes, is critically inspecting her spring-winter-summer-fall coat. It is of an age to match Joe's car.

She pours tea. One cup is cracked, the other has lost its handle.

They sip. Finally Joe clears his throat and looks up.

"I've been thinking," he says.

"So have I," says Agnes. "About the moderator . . . he could be wrong."

Joe rises in grim silence. He crosses to the phone, calls his bank, and tells 'em to stop payment on that last cheque.

★

Ridiculous? Yes: but no more so than well-intentioned Dr. McClure's assumption that the run-of-the-mill parent could or would enter into so fantastic and corrosive a relationship.

I'm all for parental aid in need. There are those aiming for professions that require lengthy training whose lives would be rough indeed without it. But such-buckshee as Dr. McClure proposes in the name of inter-family unity could only lead to an even higher divorce rate.

It is plain, in fact, that the moderator either didn't think this one through, or inhabits a different world than most of us.

What the young people I meet yearn for isn't indefinite support but a chance to live their independent lives.

This is part of growing up, and wise parents recognize it as such. By letting go gracefully when the times comes, they stand to gain far more in affection, trust and loyalty from their children than any marathon support program could produce.

'GREENBELT SUBSIDIZING' PROTESTED

Property owners in the Blenkinsop Valley are being asked to subsidize the rest of the municipality for greenbelt, a resident told the lands and planning committee Tuesday night.

The comment was made by E. H. Lohbrunner, 1101 Lohbrunner, after 55 persons heard a summary of the Blenkinsop Valley Study draft proposal prepared by the Saanich planning department.

He said filling in the urban areas will be at the expense of valley land owners.

The valley was surrounded by developed areas but most of the valley owners have chosen not to subdivide.

"Now I believe they are being asked to provide greenbelt for the entire municipality at their expense," he said.

"The value of the land will be far less than if it is allowed to be developed into urban development."

He also disagreed that it will cost $2 to $3 million to provide drainage for the flood area if this area is developed.

Another resident asked about possible incentives to maintain ownership in the face of rising taxes, rather than subdividing.

He was told that one of the report's recommendations is that council press for legislation which would allow local government more tax flexibility particularly in areas of deferred and preferential taxation.

Ald. Leslie Passmore told the meeting that the report has convinced him that Saanich council, in order to get proper development, will have to institute certain regulations and bylaws.

"Some of this will be unpopular," he said. "I am most impressed with the presentation of this study. I'll have to have a stiff backbone."

Ald. Edith Gunning said she is "very impressed" with the report. It was "certainly not a jigsaw puzzle. Whatever we finally decide, we are working on a pretty sound basis."

Committee chairman Ald. Alan Newberry said it will take a number of meetings to put the recommendations in priority "let alone consider the ramifications. Lands and planning (committee) will be discussing this plan over the next number of weeks."

The committee voted to refer the report to the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission, a council-appointed citizens group which makes recommendations on planning and rezoning matters.

Tests Planned On Dog's Brain

Tests for rabies are being conducted on the severed head of a dog which attacked a Sooke boy and his mother Monday.

Health officials here said it is unlikely the dread disease will be found present but the tests are "standard procedure."

Dr. T. J. Bailey of Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, said the head of the German Shepherd is being sent to a federal animal pathology laboratory in Vancouver.

He said the procedure is followed wherever any animal attacks a larger animal, such as man, and its viciousness is unexplainable.

BRAIN EXAMINATION

When such animals are shot, as happened in this case, it is important that they not be shot in the head as the brain must be examined.

If traces of rabies are found, the incubation period of the disease, which varies in duration, is lengthy enough to permit treatment of the person who was bitten. Untreated, it is fatal.

Meantime, the condition of four-year-old Andrew England of East Sooke Road continues to be "fair." He and his mother, Mrs. Gladys England, who is in good condition, are both in St. Joseph's Hospital.

TURNED SAVAGE

Both suffered head and face injuries when the dog, which belonged to the family, suddenly turned savage. A short time previously it had been playing with the boy and licking his face.

The dog tore a piece of scalp from the boy before being pulled away by Mrs. England. The dog then bit her shoulder and face and tore off part of her ear, police said.

Mrs. England was able to lock the dog in her basement but it later broke out and was shot by a neighbor on advice of police.

ON BEACH

The attack took place on a beach just 100 yards from the England home.

The dog, obtained from the SPCA about a week ago, was not the German Shepherd which was seized from a Victoria home last November when found in an emaciated condition, SPCA officials said.

The boy's father, J. C. England, told police he did not blame the SPCA for the dog's behavior. The SPCA had earlier reports that the animal was accustomed to children and attached to them.

New School To Be Built Near Park

Saanich School District 63 has obtained a site for its proposed new senior secondary school on the north end of Saanich peninsula.

It will be built on an eight-and-a-half acre site fronting on McDonald Park Road adjoining the 28-acre North Saanich parkland site.

Saanich school board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott said the site has been obtained thanks to "excellent co-operation" between North Saanich and Sidney councils.

The school is to open in 1972 with a student body of 300 to 400 students and eventually will be a teaching centre for more than 700 youngsters, she stated.

Mrs. Parrott said the school board hopes to develop the adjoining park jointly with North Saanich.

This will make the school readily available to the community at large and the community park will be fully accessible to the students.

TREND

She said this is part of a trend to avoid duplication of community services where a community hall might be erected only a few blocks from a school gym-auditorium or a playground be provided next to a park.

The new school is expected to relieve crowding in the Claremont Senior Secondary and will greatly shorten the distance students in the north end of the peninsula must travel to classes.

Containment Policy Sought In Development of Saanich

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Major changes directly involving rural areas of Saanich municipality, but affecting the general public because of future development, are recommended in a planning report made public Tuesday night.

The changes are designed to keep urban development within the urban and semi-urban areas and hold the rural and semi-rural areas in large sizes until development moves outwards.

The recommendations are contained in the Blenkinsop Valley Study, a draft proposal with implications far beyond the valley area.

The report, dealing with basic development policy for Saanich as a whole and not just the valley, recommends:

- Immediate action to raise the 1.6-acre minimum subdivision areas to five acres. This would affect roughly half the municipality —the northern, western and west-central sections primarily;
- Special review of Cordova Bay and Broadmead areas;
- Council agree to the limitation of the sewer enterprise area and endorse a policy that its expansion will only take place through periodic review of planning, servicing and development policies;
- Land for future residential development should be retained in parcels of more than five acres until it is needed for small-lot development and services kept to the absolute minimum to avoid the chain reaction of successive subdivision;
- Land for residential development should be made available on a carefully-staged basis, co-ordinated with population growth and Saanich's financial resources. At any given time, land zoned for small-lot development should accommodate not more than five years growth;
- Early development of all serviced lots in a subdivision should be encouraged.

Minimum of 10 Acres

For the Blenkinsop Valley area in particular—an area almost the same size as the municipality of Esquimalt—a 10-acre subdivision minimum was recommended in the flooding area around the lake and five acres elsewhere.

A year ago, Saanich placed a five-acre minimum on the valley to prevent unsightly future development until a plan was made. Previous minimums were five acres around the lake and 1.6 acres elsewhere.

The plan presented to the municipal lands and planning committee was described as deliberately a draft one.

"There will undoubtedly be a good deal of comment and suggestions arise from committee discussion, consideration by the Advisory Planning Commission, residents of the valley and, it is hoped, from citizens in all parts of the municipality," said planner Tom Loney.

"After this comment has had a chance to develop we will be revising the draft where necessary and presenting a final report."

The report said a policy of permitting subdivision between two levels—10,000 square feet (urban-type lots) and under five acres—will create "tremendous problems" for the municipality.

The existing sewer enterprise area will provide enough serviced land for 15 to 20 years of growth.

(This area includes the presently sewered areas, plus the adjacent 3,400 acres—three-quarters the size of the city of Victoria—which Saanich intends to sewer in the coming five years).

The area contains about 900 vacant sewered lots and about 7,750 vacant lots which are unsewered at the moment. Population projections show it will, mathematically-speaking, take 23 years to fully utilize the lot potential of 8,650 within the sewer enterprise area.

This supply of land will last even longer if the present apartment building trend continues, since this provides accommodation at greater densities than single-family houses.

Enough for 15-20 Years

"It is certainly safe to reach the conclusion that the (sewer) enterprise area as it now stands will supply enough land to meet all anticipated demands for 15 to 20 years," the report states.

The sewer enterprise area will serve the fringes of the Blenkinsop Valley study area and later expansion will cover the northern part. At a still later date, areas in the central and southern parts should be developed—when demand and costs warrant.

The valley has open areas well worth preserving for the benefit of all citizens and has an important role as a water storage area for the drainage of the region.

The report says a five-acre lot can be readily subdivided into urban lots and would be a worthwhile proposition for modern and attractive "cluster" subdivision.

An intermediate size, such as 1.6 acres, "in practice can rarely be further subdivided. Fragmentation of land ownership and lack of co-operation between owners generally thwarts plans for further subdivision and in effect, the intermediate size becomes the final lot size."

A five-acre lot was not too demanding on municipal services but intermediate-sized lots are generally residential in character "and residents expect a full range of services. This is a hopelessly costly proposition for the residents and the taxpayers at large."

Six years ago, the planning department produced two reports which recommended two containment areas into which residential development would be funnelled to avoid unsightly suburban sprawl. Since 1963, 92 per cent of all residential development has occurred in these areas.

Other points in the planning report include:

- Studies show it is impractical to build even light structures in the flooding area. And if it disappeared into development, drainage costs would be $2 to $3 million and it was essential to establish the principle that owners of this land "cannot expect the taxpayer at large to bear this expense;"
- Under prevailing conditions, it is "difficult to envisage" agriculture as more than an interim use in the valley. But it would be "disastrous in the long term" to destroy agricultural land adjacent to cities.
- Recommendation that an open space-urban concept be adopted, to preserve open space along with urban residential development in areas which can most economically be serviced;
- Connecting links of parkland should be acquired to link the flood area with Mount Douglas Park, Beaver Lake Park and Swan Lake.

THE VALLEY: AN AREA OF PROMISE, PROBLEMS

The Blenkinsop Valley Study, prepared by the Saanich planning department, runs to 40 pages and includes almost as many pages of appendices and maps.

Some of the key parts reflecting the recommendations include:

- "The Blenkinsop Valley is a largely undeveloped and very attractive area. Its future cannot be considered in isolation from the future of the entire municipality and the capital region;"
- "The valley has an aesthetic and natural value that could be a priceless contribution to an open space inheritance for the people of Saanich. Its value is difficult, if not impossible, to measure in dollar terms, but it exists and must not lightly be cast aside;"
- "The future timing and extent of urban development within the Blenkinsop Valley is irrevocably bound up with matters of municipal policy and of real estate demand. The municipality must strike a delicate balance between the provision of services to an area of the municipality and the cost of these services to all taxpayers in the municipality;"
- "The Blenkinsop Valley is an area of both promise and problems. It has a natural character that appears worthy of preservation, at least in part. Unless development is planned and co-ordinated with over-all municipal growth, much of the charm of the area will be lost and the cost to residents of the valley and municipality at large will be high;"
- "The forces influencing the valley are those at work in the municipality as a whole. In turn, the implications and recommendations for the Blenkinsop Valley must be considered in the context of the entire municipality. This is why some of the recommendations go beyond the immediate study area and will lead to a continuing assessment and review of planning and development policies;"
- "There is no economic, engineering or planning justification to providing trunk sewers within the Blenkinsop Valley during the life of the sewer enterprise. Future demand for a plan period of 15 to 20 years appears well catered for by areas that can be serviced by currently-planned trunk sewers;"
- "It cannot be stated too strongly that we are indeed laying the ground rules for the future. Too often in the past the effect has been negative. Hasty subdivision to small lots decades ahead of demand effectively freezes the development of the land;"
- "A valuable lesson that we can learn from our early development history is patience. The lure of short-term profits has proven an illusion, or has destroyed the potential for rational and valuable development later;"
- "The transition from a rural environment with minimal services to an urban area, with adequate services, has always proven to be difficult, frustrating and costly, unless issues and problems have been understood and correct action taken;"
- "It was discovered that it cost more to provide only unsurfaced road and water supply to a 40,000 square foot lot than to provide roads, curbs, sidewalks, street lights, water, sanitary sewer and storm sewer to a 7,000 square foot lot. It costs approximately $250 less to provide full services to an urban lot than to provide road and water to a 1.6-acre lot;"
- "It is difficult to imagine any particular advantage to subdivision to an intermediate size. The total value of a five-acre lot will increase in time, particularly as it preserves the potential for large-scale comprehensive development, and potentially crippling servicing costs will be avoided;"
- "It is the clear responsibility of the municipality to be 'reasonable' and by adopting careful economic servicing policies it is being reasonable to all who chose to live in the municipality. There is absolutely no obligation to support the 'maximum return viewpoint' of individual land owners."

Blenkinsop Valley property-owners will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in Lochside School, on Royal Oak Avenue, to discuss the municipal planning report.

The meeting was arranged by the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers' Association.

Scales Closed After Truck Sags Platform

City scales on Store St. were put out of commission today when a heavily loaded truck caused extensive damage to the weighing device.

The truck, loaded with limestone destined for the Provincial Museum rock gardens, went over the scales around 10:30 a.m. and caused the weighing platform to sag a few inches below its normal level.

Operator Les Cannon immediately blocked off both ends of the approach to the 30-ton capacity scales.

City engineer Jim Garnett said the truck had been directed to the Department of Highways weigh station on the Pat Bay Highway.

Garnett and a representative of Toledo Scales were on hand to check the scales, but were unable to determine the extent of the damage.

The scales are used by companies who wish to determine the weight of their loads and by operators directed by the police to weigh their vehicles.

"We don't have any means of weighing trucks until we have rectified the trouble here," Garnett said.

Athletic Park Ready for Play This Weekend

Royal Athletic Park can re-open this weekend two weeks ahead of schedule, says Victoria parks superintendent Herb Warren.

Closed for the past year to permit a complete re-seeding of the playing field area and for adjustments to drainage and sprinkling systems, the park was due to hold its first game April 9.

But this morning Warren said the grass damaged slightly by snow-mold during the past winter has come along better than expected.

"I shall be informing the community recreation department today that the park can be used as early as this weekend if they want to book anything in," Warren said.

Re-opening of the park will give the Victoria O'Keefes soccer club a home for its stretch drive for a playoff spot in the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

Chant to Take 'Real Look' At Road Tangle

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant held out slim hope this morning that the Blanshard Street extension may eventually link with the Pat Bay Highway.

News that the provincial government had virtually abandoned the proposed Pat Bay Highway route designed to connect with Vicotria's $1 million Blanshard extension shocked city officials over the weekend.

Interviewed this morning Chant said he is not completely familiar with all the details of the problem but promised "to take a real look and see just what the problem is as soon as the session is over."

Chant is one of the two Victoria representatives in the legislature. The other is Minister of Trade and Commerce Waldo Skillings. He was unavailable for comment this morning.

'REAL PROBLEMS'

"I am following the matter with keen interest," Chant said. "But the fact is that at present I don't know all the details and won't until I can sit down and talk with the department of highway people.

"I don't know why the road is going here instead of there, but I am aware that there are some real problems. I don't know just what they are."

In the meantime former highways minister P. A. Gaglardi has answered queries on his stand on the controversial issue with an abrupt "no comment."

Gaglardi was in charge of the highways department in 1962 when written approval to go ahead with the Blanshard extension to tie-in with the projected Pat Bay Highway was given.

Ask The Times

Q. A friend of mine wrote from England recently asking why I had such a high street number, were there really 4,000 houses on the street? Can you please give me a simple explanation? T.H.W.

A. It is Canadian custom to number streets in blocks, increasing by 100 per block. The method resulted from early-days abundance of space, allowing for additional buildings to be added after the initial creation of each block.

Q. Could you tell me where to write for a birth certificate issued in Saskatchewan? W.F.

A. The address is: Division of Public Health, Vital Statistics Division, Legislative Buildings, Regina.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Before the Magistrate

Two 19-year-olds were blistered Tuesday by Magistrate William Ostler for stealing gas from a car.

"It's amazing how young people would rather get a criminal record than face the horror of walking or the social stigma of not having an automobile," he said.

Robert N. Allan and Walter W. Woodworth, both of Work Point Barracks, each were fined $100 and placed on a $250 six-month good behavior bond.

Court was told Allan stood watch Friday while Woodworth siphoned the gas from a car in an Esquimalt Road apartment building parking lot. The gas was put in Woodworth's car and another can was kept.

Woodworth, who was prohibited from driving for six months, said he had purchased the car a week-and-a-half ago.

A 20-year-old pleaded guilty to robbing two Saanich homes and to passing a forged cheque.

William Yarno, 210 Gorge Rd., was remanded to April 2 for sentence.

He broke into a house at 70 West Maddock March 11 and stole a wallet containing $125 court was told. On March 20 he broke into a house at 3016 Dysart and took a wallet containing $41. None of the money was recovered.

Police said in both cases residents were home but Yarno waited until they were in the back yard before committing the crimes.

On March 4 the youth tendered a cheque for $38.52, receiving $15 in groceries and the rest in cash. The groceries were delivered to a vacant house.

He told the magistrate he had come from Calgary five months ago and would like to get a job and pay back the money.

William Cool, 20, of 611 Dupplin, was placed on probation and ordered to post a $100 six-month good behavior bond on a charge of committing an indecent act.

David Anderson, 20, of 805 Dereen Place, was charged with criminal negligence following a car-truck crash at Rockland and Moss on Feb. 11.

He pleaded not guilty and was remanded to May 6 for trial before Magistrate J. A. Byers.

Three youths were hurt in a car police said Anderson was driving. The truck, carrying a heavy load of oil overturned.

Harold Goodwin, 2717 Prior, was fined $300 for impaired driving and Ivan Pozderec, 2512 Douglas, was sentenced to one month in jail for the same charge.

Wilfred Mellors, 882 Dunsmuir, was jailed one month for driving while his licence was suspended.

Ronald Fraser, 443 Wilkinson, was jailed 14 days for driving while prohibited.

Vernon Reid, 550 Johnson Street, was fined $75 when convicted for common assault.

Court was told he kicked an elderly man, age 75, in the groin on March 8.

Driver Fined $250

A young driver involved in a fatal crash with a motorcyclist on the Pat Bay Highway was fined $250 Tuesday for dangerous driving.

Dennis M. Sutherland, 18, of 10124 Resthaven, Sidney, had pleaded not guilty.

Killed in the truck-cycle collison Feb. 24 was Gerd Otto Paschke, 26, of 467 Dupplin.

During his trial a week ago Sutherland said he must have fallen asleep just before his truck veered across the centre line and hit the motorcyclist.

In his judgment Magistrate William Ostler said the accused knew he was fatigued and continued to operate his vehicle.

MISCONDUCT

"He must have known he was sleepy and drowsiness must have preceded the sleep," he said. "This was wilful misconduct."

The magistrate also noted there was nothing in the evidence to reveal the extent of injuries to the motorcyclist.

"As far as this case is concerned I don't know what happened to this unfortunate rider. It is not a factor in this case.

"The sentence must be confined to the offence of dangerous driving," he said.

NEY

Youths Hurl Bombs

MADRID (AP) — A group of youths hurled two gasoline bombs at the General Electric Co.'s offices in Madrid Tuesday and set fire to the interior, witnesses reported.

Ney Here to Plug Hovercrafts

The man who believes hovercraft noise is the sound of music will speak to Saanich Chamber of Comerce Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo was invited by the chamber to address its meeting "in order to find out the real facts about the hovercraft."

When hovercraft service by Pacific Hovercraft Limited began last month between Nanaimo and Vancouver, Mayor Ney described the noise as "the sound of music —beautiful and delightful."

The Saanich Chamber of Commerce, in a statement, said Oak Bay's handling of the hovercraft issue "appeared to be more on an emotional basis than a business-like basis." Council rejected hovercraft terminating at the Oak Bay Marina.

"More than one person has claimed that the bylaw passed to prevent the hovercraft from coming into Oak Bay will not hold water and would appear to be the result of a council running scared," said the chamber.

"However, as a result of this, Saanich now seems to be the likely second choice for the terminal."

(This view does not appear to be shared by the president of Pacific Hovercraft, Barry Jones.

(He told a public meeting in the Cordova Bay district of Saanich municipality last month that his company has neither applied to council for permission to use Cordova Bay nor had seriously considered it as a landing site.

(But he did say that three sites are being considered by his company "along the eastern shore of the Saanich Peninsula" without being specific).

The chamber said citizens who are not members but would like to attend should phone 386-7032.

Water Skiing Debate Slated For Saanich

The issue of whether water sking with its motorboats should be allowed on Elk Lake in Saanich will be debated at the municipal parks and outdoor recreation committee Monday night.

Committee chairman Ald. William Noel said the Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers Association, opposed to water sking, plus several groups of water ski enthusiasts have been invited to attend.

At its February meeting, the committee tabled the issue after four alderman indicated their opposition to motorboats on the lake.

Nigerian Push Smashed, Says Biafra

By VICTOR EFFIOM

UMUAHIA, Biafra (AP) — A year-long Nigerian campaign to open a 67-mile corridor through secessionist Biafra has failed with disastrous losses of men, the Biafrans said today.

In March, 1968, a colonel and 15,000 to 20,000 men of the Nigerian 2nd Division set out from the former Biafran headquarters of Enugu for Onitsha on the Niger river. Six weeks later the colonel reached Onitsha with less than 1,000 men, the Biafrans say.

The Nigerians captured the towns of Awka and Abagana along the 67-mile route, and overran Onitsha—but Biafran ambushes virtually decimated the federals. In one, at Abagana, they lost more than 100 vehicles and the Biafrans rushed foreign reporters to the scene to display their trophies.

Since then the federal troops have maintained their hold on Awka, Abagana and Onitsha, but they have been unable to keep open the highway linking them.

In February, the Nigerians launched a fresh attempt with heavy equipment and armored vehicles to link Awka and Onitsha. But a Biafran military spokesman said the Nigerians were driven back before the push got off the ground.

The spokesman said both sides have suffered heavy casualties this month in fighting in the Awka-Onitsha sector

WANT TROOPS LINKED

He said the federal aim is to link the 2nd Division with the 1st Division and muster strength for an attack on Nnewi, the birthplace of the Biafran leader, Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu. It is 22 miles southwest of Onitsha on the main road to Owerri.

"But Nnewi is far from being threatened," the spokesman said.

Nigerian troops in Onitsha are being supplied and reinforced from across the Niger while those at Awka are fed from the Enugu area. A linkup would enable a Nigerian push southward on the main Owerri-Onitsha road that could threaten Biafra's only air strip at Uli Ihiala.

In Lagos, Nigeria, President Nixon's co-ordinator for Nigeria-Biafra relief described with tears in his eyes Tuesday Nigerian bombing raids on Biafran civilians.

Clarence Clyde Ferguson Jr. said a rehabilitation centre with nothing but bush for miles around was hit by two fragmentation bombs. He said he saw a child with half his foot severed by a bomb fragment and another with his eye gouged out by shrapnel at Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Umuahia, the secessionist capital.

The Nigerian government has said there is no deliberate bombing of Biafran civilian centres although there may have been accidents. But Ferguson said he saw two instances, including the rehabilitation centre marked with a red cross, which he called "deliberate bombing."

Canada Bans Rubin

OTTAWA (CP)—Jerry Rubin, leader of the American based Youth International Party, has been banned from entering Canada, Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen told the Commons Tuesday.

Gunmen Get $1,422

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two gunmen fled Tuesday after taking $1,422 from a downtown credit union office and beating an employee and a customer. It was the second time in 13 months that the Caisse Populaire Street Sacrament Credit Union has been robbed.

NIGERIA'S WAR EFFORT STAGGERING IN COST

IBADAN (AP)—The Nigerian federal government has spent $840,000,000 to fight the secessionist state of Biafra in the last 20 months and will need $700,000,000 to help put the splintered country back together, one of the federal government's most influential economists said here.

Log Resort Lingers Warmly

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Eaglecrest is gone!

On Sunday, flames gobbled up this log resort between Parksville and Qualicum, leaving nothing but a stone chimney or two.

Forbes

Nothing did I say?

That's not right!

The fire did destroy the cedar logs (brought in the beginning from Horne Lake, less than 10 miles away), the furniture, the antiques, the great living room and even the famed guest book. But it couldn't wipe out memories that will remain bright in the minds of all those who have know the place.

My own thoughts go back to a time in October, 1951, when a shy and retiring Princess Elizabeth (soon to be Queen) and her handsome husband, Prince Philip, were in residence there for a few days.

Mrs. Dallas Irvine was Eaglecrest hostess. I visited her at the lodge just before the royal party arrived. And it's as I saw it then that I will always remember it.

★ ★ ★

Logs used in building 15 years before had already mellowed on the outside.

Inside, they had been treated and dressed in the way of rustic buildings, in the Bavarian Alps and had retained a natural yellowish color with only a slight darkening with age.

There were four gigantic fireplaces, all built of smooth-faced boulders from Vancouver Island rivers, creeks, beaches and countryside.

Over the mantel in the main lounge hung a Chilcotin chief's saffron ceremonial cape; the house bell was dated 1883 and stamped with the crest of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad.

Mexico was represented by brilliant, legend-painted gourds and to Saltilo sarapes, even then almost extinct.

Carved old French-Canadian habitant pieces blended with the honey tones of knotty pine walls in the suite chosen for the Princess. Large polar bear skins and hooked rugs were on the floor.

★ ★ ★

Actually there was a complete collection in the lodge of British Columbia's fur bearing animals in mounts, robes, rugs and runners.

Because it was only a few hours until arrival of the royal party, the long oak refractory table in the baronial dining room was already set for six, with exquisite china and crystal that had been packed away for many years.

Flowers were everywhere. They had been placed in the various rooms by Seattle's Mrs. Thomas Balmer, wife of a vice-president of Great Northern Railway. She was an acknowledged expert in floral arrangements.

The Balmers were guests at Eaglecrest a month before when word came that the resort would be used for the royal holiday in British Columbia.

At that time Mrs. Balmer had been doing the flowers in the lodge as a pasttime. She was so good Dallas Irvine immediately invited her to return in October and again do the flowers.

★ ★ ★

In large turquoise blue pottery urns that stood at either side of the main entrance (I wonder if someone saved them last Sunday) she put masses of snowberries, golden privet, pampas grass dyed to match the urns and golden chrysanthemums.

The same golden chrysanthemums, red berries, autumn leaved Hawaiian anthuriums, ti and croton leaves in red tones were in the living room. There was also a crook-necked squash arranged to look like Carmen.

Two snowy owls on the dining room mantel were backed with pine cones and boughs and mountain ash berries and branches.

Princess Elizabeth's favorites, lily of the valley, sweetheart roses and spray orchids, were in the royal suite. On a hanging shelf in the Princess' bathroom were Christmas roses, white stock and pale green leaves.

Yellow roses and autumn leaves decorated the Prince's study.

These are only a few of the memories that return to me in clear focus as I read that Eaglecrest is gone.

Pope Pays for Trip

ROME (Reuters) — Pope Paul has made a gift of about $1,700 to a woman so that she could travel to the United States for a heart operation by Houston surgeon Dr. Michael DeBaky. The vicar of Rome, Angelo Cardinal dell'Acqua, gave Mrs. Valdivia Marino, 42, the cheque Sunday.

Immigrants Keep Freedom To Select New Language

By ANDRE BELLEMARE

QUEBEC (CP) — Despite pressure from several nationalist groups to implement French unilingualism, the new Quebec immigration department is not considering coercive measures to make immigrants integrate into the French-language stream.

Persons who want to settle in Quebec province are free—and will remain free—to assimilate into the group of their choice and educate their children in the official language of their choice, says Immigration Minister Yves Gabias.

Mr. Gabias said during an interview he believes forcing immigrants to learn French on arrival in Quebec would have the effect of reducing the number of French Quebecers.

However, a movement is under way to incite newcomers to join the French-language majority through promotion, for example, of the French language and Quebec ways and customs.

Article 3 of Bill 75, which created the immigration department last Nov. 5, says:

"The department will promote the settling in Quebec of immigrants likely to contribute to the province's development and participate in its progress; it will also promote the adaptation of these immigrants to the Quebec milieu."

WORK TOGETHER

A high official in the department said that in his opinion Quebec cannot impose the French language on immigrants because of economic considerations—Quebec does not shift its own economic gears.

The immigration and education departments were working together to give immigrants greater and greater opportunities to become familiar with French.

But since the immigration department is only four months old, all of its goals, structures and means of functioning have not been worked out.

Mr. Gabias said his department is working closely with the federal government to determine the precise jurisdiction of each level of government.

The central government still had jurisdiction over immigration and Quebec would respect this priority. The minister smiled when asked if Quebec would ask in the near future for power to choose which immigrants come to the province.

He said the province had no such intentions for the moment; and relations between the two governments in this area are excellent.

CAN'T CLOSE DOORS

Mr. Gabias said the right to refuse or approve of entry to the country still belongs to Ottawa, and Quebec consequently cannot close its doors to the Italian, Englishman or German who wishes to become established in Quebec.

Quebec has no right of veto concerning any immigration matter.

He said the department is currently working on plans for the establishment of information bureaus in seven foreign countries, including France, England and Belgium, for the benefit of those interested in coming to live in Quebec.

When the newcomer arrives, he has at his disposal welcoming bureaus in Montreal and Quebec for orientation and information.

GABIAS
. . . French not forced

Mr. Gabias says he does not feel there is duplication of jurisdiction between Ottawa and Quebec in matters of immigration. The department was useful for Quebec and should have been established long ago.

Its usefulness was reflected in the fact that it wished to attract the greatest number of immigrants while not forcing them to learn the French language.

FORCE BOLSTERED

The province could thus bolster its skilled and non-skilled labor force.

Mr. Gabias is also aware of the fact that many of the immigrants take up farming, a step he sees as a boost to agriculture in the province.

A great number of these immigrants settle in the northwest region of the province where the great majority of Quebecers are French-speaking. As a result, they are assimilated into the majority.

The problem of assimilation of immigrants is most acute in the Montreal area, said Mr. Gabias.

The minister stressed that he has no sympathy with the nationalist wing of the Union Nationale government and added he believes firmly in a renewed Canadian Confederation with peaceful coexistence between the two major ethnic groups.

The immigration department firmly adhered to this philosophy of a rigorous respect for collective and individual rights.

NO CONTRADICTION

For this reason, said Mr. Gabias, Article 1 of Bill 85, which deals with language and education rights, does not contradict immigration department policy.

The article stipulates that "the minister of education, with the assistance of the immigration minister, has the responsibility to take all necessary steps to see that persons establishing themselves in Quebec may acquire, following their arrival, a working knowledge of the French language and have their children educated in schools recognized by the minister as French-language schools."

Watts Gets Movie Theatre On Site of Sacked Store

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It might seem odd to have a dedication ceremony for a theatre marquee, but in the case of the Watts Movie House, the event seemed reasonable.

The brief ceremonies took place one morning last week on East 103rd Street, which rampaging mobs took apart in the Negro riots of four years ago. One of the journalists who covered the story was David I. Zeitlin of Life magazine. He noted that Watts hadn't a single movie theatre.

●

"Originally there had been 17 movie houses in southeast Los Angeles," says Zeitlin, now a producer for Universal. "But they had all been closed down.

"The blacks considered them merely an extension of the white establishment and hence they were against them."

Zeitlin believed something should be done to bring film entertainment to Watts, and he began soliciting help from influential persons in the movie industry. For two years the industry supported a low-cost movie program at a junior high school. But seeing movies at a school didn't appeal to the Watts youth, and the project folded

The campaign for Watts theatre continued. Cash donations came from Robert Wise, Sidney Poitier, Paul Newman and other film figures. National General Corp., operator of theatre chains, donated a projector and seats. Columbia Picutres provided a sound system. The Southern California Gas Co. gave a heating and air conditioning system.

The site of the theatre was significant: It had been a supermarket before being damaged by fire in the 1965 riots.

●

The former supermarket has been usd to develop new plays, including Big Time Buck White, currently appearing off Broadway.

The renovation, to be done mostly with Watts labor, is expected to take two months. First-run films will be provided free of charge by the movie companies, and a minimum admission charge will admit Watts residents to the 400-seat theatre.

"We've done everything we could do," said one of the speakers at the dedication. "Now it's up to the people of Watts to make it a success."

Backdoor Aid Seen for Trust

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer Tuesday charged the provincial government is preparing a backdoor route for pumping public money into Commonwealth Trust Company if its $3 million loan offer to shareholders falls through.

He made the accusation as the legislature gave third reading to the bill appropriating $130 million of the accumulated surplus for seven funds.

McGeer said he was disturbed by reports "outside the house only today that Commonwealth gave $100,000 in campaign funds to Social Credit."

There was no reaction to his statement in the legislature but outside Premier Bennett commented: "I have no knowledge of it."

Liberals and NDP attacked a provision of the bill which empowers Premier Bennett as finance minister to invest any of the $130 million in short-term deposits or notes "of any chartered bank or trust company."

The Social Credit MLAs rejected, by a 29 to 22 division, an amendment by Garde Gardom (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) to prevent the premier from using trust companies for such investment.

'Expose Any Deposit to Risk'

Gardom said the Commonwealth Trust Company situation showed that any provincial government money deposited in a trust company would be guaranteed only up to $20,000 and expose the rest of the deposit to "just a ridiculous potential risk."

Attorney-General Peterson said the Liberals were making "a tradition" of partisan attacks which hurt the image of the province's financial community.

He said "every one of their speeches costs the federal government more money" — an apparent reference to the federal Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation's rapidly rising outlay for Commonwealth Trust which reached $5.9 million last week.

Peterson said the Revenue Act permitted Bennett to invest other government funds in short-term trust accounts "so this is not a new departure.

"He (Bennett) has done an outstanding job of investing funds under the Revenue Act and his hands should not be tied this way," Peterson said, criticizing the amendment.

Two Wrongs Don't Make a Right

"Of course the Revenue Act should be changed too because two wrongs don't make a right," retorted McGeer.

"Mr. Attorney-General, we think it is an almost incredible laxity on the part of the government to let this sloppiness through in view of the Commonwealth Trust fiasco.

"Or else it's a deliberate attempt by this government to find a rote for putting this money into Commonwealth Trust in case its loan offer doesn't work."

McGeer said the bill to lend Commonwealth Trust up to $3 million was studded with numerous safeguards and guarantees for the taxpayers' money.

"Yet this bill would allow the government to put $130 million of the people's money directly into Commonwealth Trust without any safeguards of any kind.

"It makes a mockery of the (loan) bill we passed last week."

Alan Williams (L — West Vancouver - Howe Sound) said the government "has indicated there will be legislation next session to plug the loopholes in the Trust Companies Act.

"Therefore," said Williams, "before the government invests in trust companies, it should make certain that trust company regulations are in order and it should not invest this money in them until after those changes."

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said provincially-chartered trust companies are allowed to create interlocking corporate structures which are forbidden to the large federally-chartered trust companies operating in B.C.

Other Inter-Corporate Dealings

He said no public funds should be invested in the small provincially-controlled trust firms "because we find that this government has allowed these others, not just Commonwealth, to have inter-corporate arrangements."

He cited two trust company groups which were operating with similar interlocking arrangeemnts "although I'm not saying they are in the same financial plight" as Commonwealth.

"Yorkshire Trust, for example, has six companies involved in their consortium," said Dowding.

"And North West Trust has allowed the funds of shareholders and depositors to be loaned to Redden Construction Ltd. for construction of a $4.7 million apartment tower in (Vancouver's) west end.

"But the interesting thing is that the principal director of North West Trust is a Dr. (Charles) Allard of Edmonton who also is a director of the very company they are dealing with — Redden Construction."

He said North West Trust was providing the mortgage financing for construction of the project by Redden "but the main profit is skimmed off by that company and not by the shareholders of the trust company.

"And that's the way this government allows these firms to operate. They are within the law, but it should be changed," said Dowding.

BEER BUNNIES FIND SUPPORT

By beating back a beer-bunny bid, the provincial government Tuesday managed to keep women out of the draught.

New Democrat William King (Revelstoke-Slocan) charged that present Liquor Control Board regulations discriminate against women—they're not allowed to serve in beer parlors.

They can serve in licenced lounges, they can serve sandwiches to beer-drinkers but when it comes to beer they cannot serve, they can only sit and sip.

King said the government's new labor rights bill does not clear up the problem. Its anti-discrimination requirements do not apply to Crown Corporations and government agencies—such as the LCB.

He moved an amendment that would have required that government bodies comply.

●

As it now stands, the government is suggesting serving beer "is something less than desirable."

King said the idea is "ridiculous in the extreme."

He also said the government should set an example to private industry by complying totally with provisions of the new legislation.

The amendment was ruled out of order because it placed "an obligation on the Crown," but Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said the government agencies now subscribe to the general principles of the legislation.

Norman Levi (NDP-Vancouver South) withdrew an amendment barring job discrimination against people with criminal records after Peterson promised to have his department study the problem during the coming year.

Socreds Hand Down Wrap-Up Legislation

The government Tuesday night finished submitting its legislative program for this session by introducing Bill No. 77.

The Omnibus Act to Amend and Repeal Certain Provisions of the Statue Law is the traditional "catch-all" legislation brought in at the end of each session.

Its 27 sections include two amendments to other statutes which have been urged earlier by NDP MLAs.

One section would alter the Mediation Commission Act to stop any "sweetheart" deals or intimidation between an employer and employees during the course of collective bargaining negotiations by freezing the working conditions between the expiry of a working agreement and initiation of a new agreement.

This was advocated in a private bill submitted by Rae Eddie (NDP—New Westminster).

Also amended would be the Education of Soldiers' Dependent Children Act to extend its benefits to families of Korean War veterans and members of Canadian armed peacekeeping forces, as suggested by Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver South).

The bill would also strengthen the maximum general penalty for a breach of any provincial statute on summary conviction.

At present, the top penalty is a $500 fine with a six-month jail term maximum provided if the fine is not paid.

The amendment would add a six-month jail sentence as a direct alternative to the $500 fine available to a magistrate in deciding sentence.

The bill also clarifies the cabinet right to appoint representatives to any hospital board "notwithstanding the provisions of any other Act, public or private, or the constitution, bylaws, rules or regulations of a hospital."

And, the omnibus legislation would rename licensed private detectives as "private investigator" to elimintae any cnofusion with police.

Rights Bill Change Beaten Down

By JOHN SLINGER

Repeated opposition attempts to have the government's anti-discrimination bill forbid discrimination against a person for political beliefs were beaten down in the legislature Tuesday.

The bill has now passed committee stage and will be given third and final reading later in the session.

On two formal votes and four voice votes, the Socreds turned back combined NDP and Liberal attempts to have amendments by Tom Berger (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) included in the bill.

The amendment would have added "political beliefs" to the list of race, creed, color and sex included in the labor-oriented rights bill.

On each of the formal votes the government side refused an opposition request that the vote be formally recorded.

Flared Opposition Leader Robert Strachan at Premier Bennett's refusal: "I'd be ashamed of that, too, if I were you."

POLITICAL BELIEFS

Berger's main argument ran that "no employer should be allowed to discriminate in any way because of the political beliefs of those seeking employment."

There should be no reason for a person to hide his political beliefs. To force him to do so is to restrict a fundamental freedom of speech.

Robert Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said leaving this loophole in the bill "makes it possible for every bigot in our society to rush through."

As Berger put it, the legislation permitted a person to object to another on any of the other discriminatory grounds, but claim political beliefs as the reason.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson called across the floor as a vote was taken: "Are you going to force employers to hire fascists, to hire anarchists . . . communists? This is your policy, not ours."

Bennett joined the derision, telling the New Democrats: "You just want to break down the capitalist system."

Dave Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam) repeated the oft-told story of his dismissal from the attorney-general's department because he was a declared member of the CCF, the NDP's precursor.

"This government has shown that for Socreds there is one kind of rule, but for members of other parties there is no kind of protection."

Strachan said that one of the province's leading forest industries once told him they had no job to offer the former carpenter "because you have been critical of free enterprise."

Peterson insisted that "some of the pople subscribe to the overthrow of this government by force."

And again Bennett added that the NDP "wants to let the anarchists in."

Berger said that while his party does not support the Communists, nevertheless the Communists are a legal political party in Canada.

'FREEDOM TO BURN'

Bennett said the opposition was seeking "freedom to burn down the house."

Called Barrett: "Is John Birch here today?"

Alex MacDonald (NDP — Vancouver East) quoted Voltaire's "I do not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

Then he said the government would be "slipping back into the dark ages" of human rights.

The government would refuse people of differing persuasions jobs, support for their families and would even keep them out of restaurants, said MacDonald.

Human Rights Job Earmarked for IRB

The existing eight-member Industrial Relations Board headed by deputy labor minister William Sands will double as the province's new Human Rights Commission.

This was indicated to the legislature by Labor Minister Peterson Tuesday night.

He made the revelation while attacking an amendment by Liberal Barrie Clark (L—North Vancouver-Seymour) which would have added "ombudsman powers" to the commission so it could investigate autocratic actions by government.

Peterson said the amendment should be ruled out of order because adding such duties to the commission would transform it into a full-time organization which would require salaries for full-time members.

"It is not the intention that this should be a full-time commission," said Peterson. "It will only be occupied part of the time with these duties (hearing complaints about discrimination mainly from employers and unions).

"My recommendation (when the cabinet is ready to proclaim the new legislation) will be that the same people who now serve on the board of labor relations will constitute the Human Rights Commission," said Peterson.

The IRB is composed of labor department officials including Sands, C. R. Margison, Mrs. Fraudena Eaton, C. Murdoch, J R. Edgett, R.S.S. Wilson, D. H. Chapman, and Mrs. Emily Ostapchuk.

Chairman Herb Bruch ruled Clark's amendment out of order on the grounds that only the government had the right to propose changes involving payment of new salaries.

Clark challenged his ruling but the Social Credit MLAs upheld it in a division.

Booming Area Draws Protests From Islanders

By ED GOULD

GANGES—Residents of nearby Booth Canal are protesting because they say a logging firm operating a booming ground in the main channel has blocked their boat basin.

Both provincial and federal governments are involved and a jurisdictional dispute has arisen.

"The provincial government should never have issued a land use permit to allow logs to be dumped in this canal," Don Layard said in an interview.

Layard said he almost lost his small fishboat last weekend when gale force winds socked the area.

"I had to go out every two hours during that wind to make sure my anchor held," Layard said. "And all because the government lets someone stick logs in a navigable channel."

'FED UP'

The logger, Albert Kaye of Ganges, received a land use permit to dump logs in the canal, on the west coast of Salt Spring Island, in February.

The residents said they "got fed up trying to get through to the provincial government" and wrote the federal Department of Transport which enforces the Canada Navigable Waters Act. This law states no one can permanently obstruct a public waterway.

DOT sent in a helicopter with two inspectors headed by district manager L. E. Slaght of Victoria Marine Services base who informed Kaye and provincial department director of lands W. R. Redel the channel must be opened.

Provincial inspector Al Rhodes then inspected the canal and Kaye was told to post a $500 bond and ordered to open the channel.

He built a log skid and began to dump logs in quantity the first of March.

Commercial fishermen like Dick Larson say they can't get past the boom to the boat basin beyond.

Larson has had to wait five hours until high tide to squeeze past on the shallow port side of the canal in his dinghy. He still can't get his trawler in nor can fellow fisherman and boat builder Otto Mustad.

NO DRAWBRIDGE

Layards wife, Olive, in an effort to smooth worsening relations between the logging firm and the boat owners, asked Kaye if the logs could be sorted across the canal where similar operations had been carried out in the past.

"If you think I'm towing my logs all the way over there, lady, you're crazy," Kaye told her.

He said he couldn't operate the boom like a drawbridge.

The way it now stands the two government departments are apparently deciding who should take the next step.

'Trust Us' in Helping the Indians

Premier Bennett in an emotional speech Tuesday asked political opponents to trust his sincerity in trying to help Indians.

Despite his plea, the $25 million First Citizens perpetual fund to help Indians was buffeted by partisan debate for almost two hours.

Liberals castigated the provincial government for not providing services to Indians on reserves.

Social Credit MLAs chastised the federal authorities for ingnoring the plight of reserve Indians.

NDP members blasted both Liberals and Socreds as representatives of private enterprise which had put Indians into the reserves in the first place.

"I would hate it to go out across the province that there are misgivings about the money which we are making available to our Indian people," said Bennett trying to placate the quarrel over who was to blame.

"What has happened over the past 100 years is water over the dam and not heaven itself can change that.

"What I would hope is that this will start a new era of confidence and trust between our Indian brothers and ourselves.

"But if there is to be a new approach to our Indians it must be on a basis of confidence in each other.

"Any suggestion we are not being sincere will just be putting another barrier between us and the native peoples.

"It is their culture we want to recognize.

"We are going to trust them because we are going to go out across the province and get their advice (on administration of the fund).

"White people have destroyed the confidence of the Indian and we want to restore that confidence by holding out the hand of friendship.

"We want to restore that confidence in their own worth by helping and trusting each of our Indian brothers so that they will be proud to be an Indian, proud to be a British Columbian and proud to be a Canadian.

"This bill is not a patent medicine that will cure all the problems.

"But it is a genuine effort to help and to extend our hand.

"I hope our Indians will put out their hand in friendship in return.

"We may make mistakes," said Premier Bennett, "but we will always do our best to help them help themselves."

The only Indian MLA Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) welcomed the fund and said it is essential that Indians be consulted and allowed to participate in their own destiny.

He said they will request representation on the administration board which is to decide how grants from the fund will be made.

Oak Bay Downs Cowichan

Oak Bay Senor Secondary School defeated Cowichan 340 to 240 in a zone final in the current CBC Reach for the Top program series.

The program, taped earlier at Nanaimo Senior Secondary was shown on television Tuesday night.

Oak Bay's David Burke, Sally John, Rob Thompson and Kelly Edmison, took an early lead over Barbara Horton, Russell Getz, Ken Pite and Janet Buckham of Cowichan.

Cowichan earlier defeated Victoria 400 to 200 to get into the zone playoff.

Single Ownership For Rival Stores

GANGES—Two long-time rival stores here soon will be owned by one company.

Richard Toynbee and his two partners, who recently bought the 70-year-old Mouat Brothers General Store, are buying its only competitor, Salt Spring Trading Company.

The White Elephant restaurant, formerly run by Mary Fellows, also has been taken over by the Toynbee firm. It is situated between the two retail stores and is now known as the Ganges Crest.

Toynbee declined to discuss the prices involved in the takeovers.

He shrugged off a suggestion that a monopoly of the two island "supermarkets" might indicate a lessening of competition.

"We are not competing with each other," he said "We are competing with off-island stores."

A lagoon that separates the Mouat store from the restaurant will be filled in for a parking lot, Toynbee said. Spencer Marr of Terrace will become manager of the operation.

Pushers Imprisoned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five traffickers in heroin, arrested during a mass drug roundup earlier this month, were sentenced to prison terms Tuesday.

Magistrate Gordon Johnson sentenced Lloyd Dunn, 31, to five years after he pleaded guilty to selling a capsule of heroin to an undercover police officer March 4.

Dunn, who was arrested while out on parole, has two years of an unexpired prison sentence to serve before he begins the five-year term.

The magistrate sentenced Patricia Chartier, 26, Lynn E. Mint, 28, Edwin Peason, 28, and Douglas Allistone, 25, to three-year terms for trafficking.

MLA DOUBTS SEWAGE AID

An opposition MLA Tuesday said he believed few municipalities will receive provincial government support for construction of sewage treatment plants.

Robert Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) was speaking during third reading of a bill to grant municipalities 75 per cent of costs of plants over and above what the municipality itself can pay for with an annual two-mill tax levy.

Williams said the two-mill levy in most instances would pay for the whole plant.

In Greater Vancouver, two mills a year would amount to $2.2 million he said.

"For $2.2. million a year you could have gold doorknobs on sewage treatment plants before getting any government money," he said.

Essay Contest Won By Chemainus Youth

DUNCAN—Edward Cooke, 17, of Chemainus, has won first prize in the Duncan Soroptimist Club's annual youth citizenship essay competition with his theme "My Responsibility to the Community".

His entry, judged by retired teachers E. G. Goddard and Miss N. C. Denny, will be submitted to the regional competition in New Westminster. First prize in the Western Canada finals is $1,000 to be used as the winner chooses.

Coffee House Sought In Former Hospital

DUNCAN — A group of Cowichan Valley young adults is seeking room in part of the abandoned King's Daughters' hospital building to operate a coffee house.

Twenty persons have met with the newly-formed Duncan and District Community Resources Group formed by teachers, parents, clergy and representatives from service clubs interested in the welfare of young people in this area.

A spokesman for the group, most of whom admitted they had been or still were on drugs, said "we want to run this coffee house on our own as a paying proposition with our own constitution and rules which we will strictly adhere to."

He said adults and parents could visit the coffee house at will and there would be no alcoholic beverages or drugs allowed.

Mayor Jim Quaife said he would ask Cowichan District Hospital officials about the use of one of the old KDH buildings.

Street Work, Curling Lease Win Approval at Nanaimo

NANAIMO (CP) — Nanaimo ratepayers approved two money bylaws by overwhelming majority Tuesday.

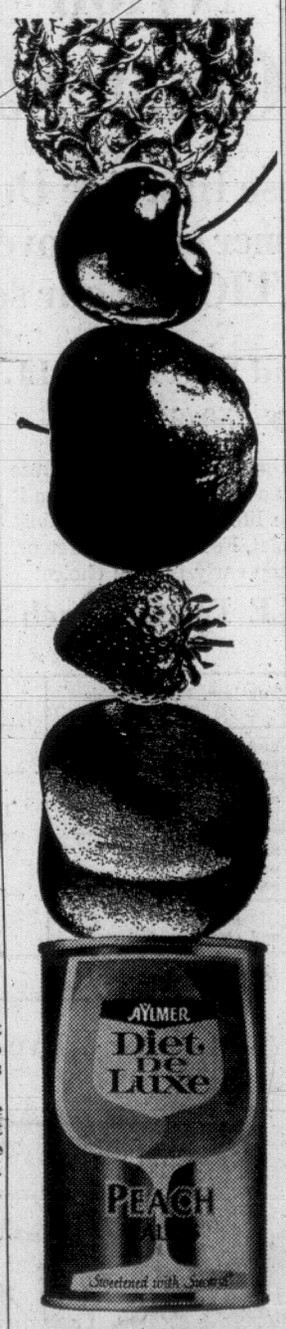

The first, a $650,000 bylaw for street improvements and storm drains, passed by a vote of 1,302 to 273.

The second, to permit the city to lease land at Bowen Park to the Nanaimo Curling Club at $1 a year for 20 years for a curling rink, was approved 1,388 to 185.

The $250,000 rink will be built by the club, at no cost to taxpayers.

Only 25 per cent of those eligible voted.

De Luxe Scalloped Oysters

Start heating oven to 425° F. Combine 2 cups coarse toast crumbs and ¼ cup melted butter; cover bottom greased 10"x6"x2" baking dish with one third of mixture. Arrange 1 dozen oysters on top. Combine ¼ cup oyster liquid with ½ tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, 2 tbsp. light cream or top milk, 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce, dash cayenne pepper, and 2 tbsp. sherry. Spoon half of this sauce over oysters. Sprinkle with one third of crumbs; arrange another dozen of oysters on top, then sauce, then crumbs. Bake 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Notre Dame Head Warns Activists

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (CP) — The president of the University of Notre Dame says violence has no place on the university campus and universities must solve their problems from within or they will be destroyed from without.

Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, who warned students Feb. 17 that those involved in disruptive protests "will be given 15 minutes of meditation to cease and desist," says too much emphasis had been placed "on the 15-minute business."

"The only point I wanted to make . . . was that the only ultimate solution must come from within universities."

His warning that those who continued disruption would face expulsion was contained in an eight-page letter to students, their parents and faculty.

At a news conference a month later, Father Hesburgh said that whether it is 15 minutes or 15 hours, the prime point is that a student "must make the decision to respect the values of a community."

"If not, he forfeits his right to be a member of that community."

Father Hesburgh said that public confidence in universities is disappearing and he fears that support for schools is dying.

"We seem on the verge of getting repressive legislation from federal and state governments," he said.

Prisoners Testify on Stockade Death

FT. LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — Two soldiers who saw a prisoner at the Presidio in San Francisco shot to death are to be allowed to testify at a general court-martial.

One is Pte. John D. Colip, who saw the shooting of Pte. Richard Bunch by a Presidio stockade guard last Oct. 11.

Colip is one of 27 Presidio prisoners who staged a sit-down Oct. 14. He was convicted of mutiny last month and was sentenced to four years in prison.

Four others who took part in the demonstration Oct. 14, all from California, are on trial at Ft. Lewis. They are Privates Edward O. Yost, 23, Ricky L. Dodd, 21, William H. Hayes, and Harold J. Swanson, 19.

There were five in the group, but mutiny charges against the fifth, Pte. Michael E. Murphy, 19, were dropped temporarily because of illness.

Howard Denike, one of the defence lawyers, said the two shooting witness will show the strong fear that was created among the stockade prisoners by the violent death.

"We are not offering this testimony for truth of the shooting but to show the version the other prisoners were told of the incident," Denike said. "This was the only version the prisoners had. They did not have the government version."

The army said Bunch was shot after he hurled taunts and then tried to flee from a work detail. It ruled the shooting was justifiable.

The defence contends the sit-down demonstration was set off by the shooting. Capt. Joseph Choate, another defence attorney, said the defendants "were not out there with vicious criminal intent. They were not out there to override the military. But they were there in the belief this was the only way they would express certain grievances and fears."

The stockade chaplain, Maj. John Williams, described the scene in the stockade Oct. 11.

"The prisoners besieged me. They were in an emotional state and used the word murder. Hostility was running pretty high."

Jungle Training Session Over

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP) — Two weeks of jungle training in Jamaica's dense and mountainous bushland ended with the return to their home bases this weekend of 1,000 Canadian servicemen.

Air Transport Command aircraft flew back the deeply-tanned soldiers, most of them from the Royal Canadian Regiment at London, Ont., in a shuttle service of Hercules and Yukon planes that started Thursday.

Canadian Asbestos Industry's Disease Probe May Help World

By DAVE MacDONALD

MONTREAL (CP) — A scientific project sponsored by Canadian asbestos mining companies could benefit the whole world.

Its aim is to gather scientifically as much factual information as possible about the relation of asbestos to various diseases. On this information would be based systems of avoiding diseases or reducing their danger.

The project is under the Institute of Occupational and Environmental Health, set up by the industry in 1966.

Its most important offshoot at the moment is a three-year epidemiological survey being carried out by a McGill University research team.

Part of the team's job is to examine the health history of thousands of asbestos workers and draw statistical conclusions.

The institute itself is unusual in that it has no laboratories, no technicians and only one permanent employee plus a secretary.

The employee is multilingual Dr. Premysl Pelnar, who headed a Czechoslovakian occupational health institute in his native Prague for 20 years before being fired, he says, for not belonging to the Communist party.

In 1964 he fled to the United States, working there for two years before coming to the Montreal institute as scienific secretary.

The institute occupies a small downtown Montreal office.

In addition to supervising the epidemiological survey it acts as a centre where information from research teams all over the world studying asbestos-related diseases is filed and analysed.

Paul Filteau, general manager of the Quebec Asbestos Mining Association whose member companies set up the institute, said in an interview the institute's annual $250,000 budget is meant to keep the companies in touch with relevant research everywhere.

"No actual research is done by the institute. We make grants to scientists who are working in a particular field connected with asbestos diseases and ask only that they tell us first of their findings.

"Afterwards we are happy when they publish their findings because it helps to spread general knowledge and avoids duplication of research."

Dr. Pelnar, who holds a degree in internal medicine, says decisions to make cash grants are made by the institute's scientific committee, composed of U.S., British and Canadian scientists, which meets several times a year.

The survey being directed by Dr. Corbett McDonald of McGill had at its disposal 42,029 x-ray films taken during the last 20 years of several thousand asbestos workers in Quebec mines.

Dr. Pelnar said it is known that inhalation of the silky asbestos fibre can cause some persons to develop asbestosis.

In this disease the fibres gradually replaced living tissue in the lungs. Although it could not be cured, its progress could be halted by treatment and removal from the source of infection.

A section of the medical profession believes exposure to asbestos fibres can cause cancer.

Dr. Irving Selikoff of New York City's Mount Sinai Hospital has said that 40 per cent of 36,000 U.S. asbestos insulation installers could eventually die of cancer as a result of their occupation exposure.

The form of cancer that is frequently discussed today in the asbestos industry is mesothelioma, a rare cancer that can occur in the upper chest wall or the lining of the stomach and which can cause death within six months.

"So far it is not proved to our satisfaction that there is a link between asbestos and mesothelioma," said Dr. Pelnar.

"But findings in various parts of the world in recent years that persons suffering from mesothelioma had in some cases been occupationally exposed to asbestos make careful research necessary."

X-Ray Technician Wins Gold Medal

A Victoria nurse and X-ray technician will present a paper "entirely new in Canada" on X-ray techniques to a nation-wide conference in June.

Mrs. F. D. Fielding, technician at Royal Jubilee will address the annual convention of the Canadian Society of Radiological Technicians in Toronto.

She was awarded the Gervart Gold Medal Essay award by the society, and a small cash award for her paper.

It describes a method recently introduced to Canada of detecting benign brain tumors. Mrs. Fielding's paper is the first detailed study of the method made in this country.

A YEAR'S RESEARCH

It involves photographing the skull and trying to determine if there is growth in two small canals inside the skull.

Forty-eight such tests have been conducted at Royal Jubilee since Mrs. Fielding began her research a year ago.

In six cases a tumor was found. Mrs. Fielding explained however that the other 42 normal cases were just as important to her research. These tests proved there was no tumor in the canals, and this information enabled doctors to look elsewhere for the cause of the trouble, she explained.

CAUSE PRESSURE

The tumors which her test detects are not malignant or cancerous themselves but removal is important as they can cause pressure in other parts of the brain.

Mrs. Fielding's paper which includes sample X-rays explains how to position the head for taking X-rays, and other aspects of X-ray procedure.

Mrs. Fielding came to Canada from Philadelphia in 1959. She was trained in Sweden, the birthplace of neuroradiology, and has worked in Europe and America with some of the world's leading neuroradiologists.

Mrs. Fielding, wielding one of the huge X-ray machines which she uses in her research. An X-ray technician at Royal Jubilee Hospital, Mrs. Fielding has recently written a paper on an X-ray technique and will present her findings at a national convention of the Canadian Society of Radiological Technicians.

Students Love to Learn In 'One-Room Museum'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phyllis Sanderson admits to being a born nomad, and because of this has perhaps one of the most unique biology labs in Canada.

Ralph Thomas, her principal at Gladstone secondary school in Vancouver, calls her lab a one-room museum.

Miss Sanderson has collected numerous specimens during her world travels to arouse the interest of her six classes of Grade 11 and 12 pupils.

Trim and enthusiastic, she takes off on her own every summer. On weekends she hunts for specimens too, going down to the zoo if curator Alan Best has a prime specimen which has died recently.

Two king penguins—one stuffed, one a skeleton—and a 10-foot python came from the zoo. The python skeleton is over the classroom door and its skin is nailed to the back wall.

"The day we skinned the python there were 500 students standing outside the window watching," she said. "It took us three months to mount the skeleton. The students did it and they stayed with it.

"It's not perfection. It's what they learn in doing."

Miss Sanderson's course is an elective one, with most students 16 and 17 years old.

TAKE RESPONSIBILITY . . . BE ALERT

Top Secretaries Tell Tricks of Trade

by SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — If you want to be a top-notch secretary, don't count just on your efficiency at typing and taking dictation.

Basic as these skills are, there are many more tricks to the trade, say five Ottawa members of the Association of Administrative Assistants or Private Secretaries.

Mary Johnson, executive secretary to the president of Computing Devices of Canada, says an important asset is a varied work background. Legal experience is especially valuable.

Gloria Zuana, senior clerk in the humanities and social sciences division of the Canada Council, says that basically you just have to use your head. If something doesn't look right, check it.

"You should have the feeling that you want to be part of a team and be willing to take some responsibility," says Marion Bray, administrative officer in the purchase research branch of the federal defence production department.

"You have to be alert at all times and interested in the job. If you do show some initiative and some desire for responsibility, you'll be given all you can handle."

Helen McVeigh, commercial specialist at the U.S. embassy, says that if a person really reads and thinks about correspondence instead of merely glancing at it and filing it, extra work can often be saved.

Miss Bray says it's important to be willing to accept the challenges presented to you.

"Maybe you're asked to take dictation from the deputy minister of a department and you shake inside—but you shake before and after you take the dictation not during it."

If information you want is supplied by more than one source, Mary Johnson cautions that it is wiser not to discourage the second or third callers by letting them know you already have it. Many times one of these other persons may be the only one with the answer.

"Also, if you have the opportunity to help somebody and it enables them to reach your work level, this is a feather in your cap. If you have arrived at a certain position and you're looked up to, you have to work to make yourself realize you're not on a pedestal—just fortunate."

In business, she says, many people—not just secretaries—don't realize they may be putting their jobs on the line by discussing office information away from the office.

"Industry is competitive. You can be enthusiastic about your company and comment on people you work with, but information as far as the work is concerned belongs only on the inside."

Miss Bray is equally emphatic on another point: "If you don't know the answer to something, say so. But go on and find out."

Mathilda Teases Curious Penny

By PENNY SAVER

Mathilda called me on the telephone one day and very formally invited me to drop over in the evening to watch one of her favorite shows. "I thought you might like to get away from the dishes and the children for a while. After all, no matter how quiet children try to be they are only human and four make more noise than one." This was a very untypical thing for Mathilda to say so I came, not because I wanted to watch the show or "get away from the dishes and the children" but because I was dying to know what my aunt was up to. When I arrived she made a pot of tea, placed out a plate of cookies in easy reach and dimming the light, sat back to watch the show.

By the time the show was over my curiosity had reached an all-time high. "All right, Mathilda," I snarled in my best Mafia accent. "Come clean. Why did you want me over tonight." Mathilda just smiled and turned up the light. Suddenly it hit me. She had turned up the light and before that turned it down.

Mathilda, in fact, had found just the thing I was looking for—an adaptor that eliminates expensive tri-light bulbs, but gives the tri-light effect. It is not the same adaptor as I had had my eye on, but one that is perhaps better—this adaptor will give any desired gradient of brightness from candle-light to a full 150 watts.

Slight Differences

The adaptor I had been looking for had one advantage over the one Mathilda has in that it could be screwed into the existing socket like a light bulb then the light bulb screwed into it. Mathilda's has to replace the whole socket unit, requiring a bit of electrical skill. Still, the one I had been looking for could only give a tri-light effect in a tri-light unit. Mathilda's can be used in any unit, single or triple switch, and still give gradients of light. This is because the unit includes a switch of its own that decreases the power going to the filament, hence reducing the amount of light the bulb gives off. Incidentally, running a high wattage filament at lower power continually will make the filament last longer according to my understanding of how a light-bulb works. This variable light socket, which will make any lamp into a tri-light, costs $7.95 but when I think of how easily Mathilda dimmed the lights so they wouldn't interfere with the television show, I think it is worth it.

Many children like to sleep with a night light to keep the googlies away. For very small children with this habit I would recommend the night lights I found for $3.98. These are made of a spongy plastic that won't hurt a baby if he reaches out to grab it. Some are shaped like praying boys, others like praying girls and others still like a perky puppy. Inside is a seven-watt night light bulb that can be easily removed. The sponge surrounds it completely and the light glows ever-so-softly through it. These lights are adorable, as well as being safe for children.

KNIT AND CHAT

Lacy and Knotted Fringes for Afghans

By MAY MAC LEAN

Last week I was talking about a church group who had made and were finishing by crochet, an afghan. I had intended to give the instructions for a knitted fringe, but there just wasn't the space. It is very handy to have these instructions, so cut them out and save them for future reference. You will find that the top part of the fringe is lacy, somewhat like you see round old Spanish shawls. I am sure you will be pleased with this idea.

Using appropriate size needles to the wool being used, cast on 10 stitches.

First row: Wool round the needle to make a stitch, then purl the next two stitches together; repeat from the beginning all across the row.

Repeat this row until you have the desired length.

Next Row: Work six stitches and drop the remaining four stitches. Cast off these six stitches on the next row. Let the four stitches completely unravel back to the beginning. You are now ready to sew the fringe into position.

Another idea for finishing the edge of the afghan, would be a knotted fringe. Cut the remaining wool into even lengths, the desired depth of the fringe. Taking two strands at a time, fold in half and with a crochet hook insert into the edge and pull through a loop. Pass the ends of the strands through the loop made and pull tight. Continue evenly all along the edge.

Another idea would be to make a bias strip and sewing over the edge. For this you would need to cast on about 10 or 12 stitches. Working in stocking stitch, increasing one stitch at the beginning of every knit row and decreasing one stitch at the beginning of every purl row. In this way you will always have the same number of stitches on the needle. Continue until the strip is the desired length. By placing the bias strip over the outer edge, it makes a neat and very firm edge.

It is now time to think of some serious knitting for spring, so why not plan a smart knitted suit for your Junior Miss? The originals were made from a tweedy yarn, but they can also be made from a double knitting weight too. Instructions are for sizes 4-6-8 and will fit a chest size of 23-24-26 inches. The raglan style jacket can either have a neat collar or attached hood.

To order Leaflet No. 6832, send 35c in coin or money order (no stamps or personal cheques please) together with a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to: May E. Mac Lean, "Knit and Chat", care of The Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering.

Young girls with an eye for style will love these smart knitted suits offered on Leaflet No. 6832. The suits can be made either from a tweedy wool or a double-knitting yarn. The raglan-style jacket can be made with a neat collar or an attached hood. This pattern comes in sizes 4, 6 or 8.

Lines Around the Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin become smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Circulation and circulating are both important. We have to keep things moving if we are to remain peppy and pretty. The better the circulation of our blood the better nourished our tissues will be. The more we come in contact with our fellow humans the wider our interests and horizons will become.

Lowman

Some years ago there was a great fad for lying on a slant board with the feet at the high end in order to fill out facial contour and erase wrinkles. This habit is still held in high regard by many because it is restful and it does bring more blood to the face. For this reason it probably is beneficial. However, any change in facial contour is due to swelling and is only temporary.

With exercise we should regularly whip up a storm, or at least a breeze, in our bloodstream. The value of exercise in lowering the cholesterol level, in preventing heart attacks and strokes and in building stamina is well recognized. However, when beginning a routine, you should first have your blood pressure and heart checked by your physician and then start in slowly.

Poor circulation is one of the problems many folks encounter as they grow older. If a person is in good health and exercises under his doctor's supervision, he can profit by it even in later years. As a matter of fact your physician may prescribe some kind of exercise for you, no matter what your age and even if you are not in the best condition.

Spadea Designer Pattern

Jo Copeland

Jo Copeland has designed the "all-season" dress. The neat lines are made even more attractive by the geometric top-stitching which shapes the yoke and skirt motif. Pockets are cleverly hidden in the side seams. The contrasting scarf at the neck adds a youthful touch. Fabric suggestions: linen, cotton, shantung, lightweight woollen. 63578 is cut in Misses sizes 10-18. Size 12 requires approximately 2 yards of 54" fabric for the dress and 1 yard of 45" of contrast for scarf. To order 63578; state size, include name and address. Send $2.50 postpaid. Send orders for books and patterns to Pattern Dept., Victoria Daily Times. Make all cheques and money orders payable to the Times. This pre-cut, pre-perforated Spadea Designer Pattern comes in ready-to-wear sizes that produce a better fit and are easier to make. Order normal ready-to-wear size and allow one week for delivery. Pattern books by classification: Evening Dresses; afternoon and cocktail dresses. Each book $1.25 plus 25c postage and handling. First time designers have published sewing secrets. DEAR ABBY . . .

Teen-Ager Fed Up With Her Country

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl who is disgusted with the U.S.A. Tonight I read in the newspaper where a 26-year-old man volunteered to join an army reserve unit but was turned down because his hair was too long.

Abby, for God's sake, he volunteered to serve his country, and they wouldn't have him — and what for? His hair! I have never heard of anything so ridiculous in all my life!

First the government complains because of draft-card burners, then when someone wants to fight for his country they tell him he can't because of his hair style. And the establishment wonders why the youth rebels. I am ready to pack my bags and move to Australia.

DISTUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Men in the service must cut their hair to regulation — just as they must dress uniformly. There are sound reasons for this just as there are arguments in favor of one's "right" to his individuality. I'm not so sure you'd find it any different in Australia.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the man who thought his wife was in love with her doctor brought to mind the following: I vaguely recall some of the outlandish things I said when I was coming out of the anesthetic after having given birth to my first child.

I admired and trusted my obstetrician. I was extremely grateful for the care he had given me, and, of course, I was glad to have it all over. In my conscious state I wouldn't have looked at this doctor twice. He was old, short, fat, and homely and my husband was young, tall, and handsome, but for some crazy reason I heard myself saying things to my doctor that only a woman would say to the man she loved.

I believe doctors (especially obstetricians) are familiar with this type of thing. It's not at all unusual. It's only temporary, and I think it's called "transference."

NO HARM DONE

DEAR NO HARM: You're right. And there is no harm done as long as it's only temporary, and you don't transfer too much.

DEAR ABBY: Once you told a girl who wrote in and said she never got asked to dance that if she wouldn't stand in a crowd with a bunch of other girls she might get asked. I remembered that advice although at the time I was too young to go to dances. Well, I just came from my first school dance and I took that advice and I was chosen. Thank you.

Prof's Wife Recalls Filth In a Japanese POW Camp

KITCHENER (CP) — Mrs. William Lobban, who heads the Canadian Save the Children Fund campaign here, can speak from personal experience when she refers to the organization's needs.

The wife of a University of Waterloo professor, Mrs. Lobban recalls her childhood in a Japanese prisoner-of-war camp, where she spent 3½ years.

She recalls her family was saved after they moved into a condemned hospital from the prison camp. Her father, who was head of the international police at Shanghai before capture, was dying of malaria.

"We were saved in the nick of time," Mrs. Lobban said. "We learned later that the Japanese had voted to gas all women and children imprisoned."

She said the hospital, condemned in the 1920s, was occupied by Japanese troops before her family moved into a large room with 45 other prisoners.

"I know what it is like as a child to be deprived of food and medicine. That is why I feel strongly about it because I have been through it."

Sooke Women Win Award For Community Safety

VANCOUVER — The Sooke-North Sooke Women's Institute has won the provincial community safety award for the second year in a row.

City medical health officer Dr. G. H. Bonham presented the award on behalf of the British Columbia Safety Council at luncheon Friday.

The community safety awards are presented annually to organizations which sponsor outstanding safety programs in their home communities. Second and third prize winners were the Trail and District Safety Council and the Connaught Heights PTA from New Westminster. An award of merit was presented to the Penticton and District Safety Council.

As B.C. winner, the Sooke-North Sooke Women's Institute advances to the National Carol Lane Community Safety Awards contest sponsored by Shell Canada Limited.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a supply.

McGill Demonstration Called 'An Attack From the Outside'

By CLAUDE ARPIN

MONTREAL (CP) — When 30 club-wielding policemen swept his followers off the McGill University campus nearly four months ago, Raymond Lemieux vowed: "We will return one day. The Bastille will fall."

Now the leader of La Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire has announced he will head a mass demonstration Friday evening in support of demands that the university become a French-language institution.

Eleven members of the nationalist movement occupied the university's computer centre for four hours last Dec. 3 to dramatize demands for unilingual French schools in the province.

Mr. Lemieux has appealed to participants in Operation McGill to avoid violence, a sentiment echoed by McGill authorities.

Robert F. Shaw, vice-principal in charge of administration, referred to the coming demonstration as "an attack from outsiders" and urged students sympathetic to the university's cause to refrain from engaging in "counter-demonstrations."

APPEALS TO PUBLIC

Dr. H. Rocke Robertson, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill, issued a similar appeal Tuesday and called on the public to "avoid the McGill area."

"The best interests of the university would be served by members of the public showing, by their absence, that they do not support the methods of the demonstrators."

The nationalist St. Jean Baptiste Society has decided not to take part in the demonstration.

The society said in a statement Tuesday that although it feels there is no room in Montreal for two English-language universities, the changes should be made at the government level and not by the university administration.

At the time of the occupation of the data centre, Robert Bergevin, a spokesman for the 11, said McGill was chosen as a target "because it is the symbol of the English domination of Quebec."

USES STRONGER TERMS

Stanley Grey, an organizer of Friday's demonstration, describes the university as an undemocratic reactionary institution "controlled by and servicing the giant Anglo-American corporations responsible for the economic exploitation and cultural oppression of the (French-Canadian) majority."

In the Feb. 10 issue of the students' newspaper, the McGill Daily, Mr. Gray, 24, a lecturer in political science at McGill, claimed that the English-speaking minority in Quebec takes up 42 per cent of the available university space.

Furthermore, he wrote, about 10,000 graduates from 23 junior colleges will be denied entry next year into Quebec's three French-language universities because of an acute shortage of space.

McGill, he said, must not be satisfied with enrolling a greater number of graduates from the junior colleges; it must adapt itself to the graduates instead of assimilating them.

English-Language University 'A menace . . . an Obstacle . . .'

"In other words, it must teach them in the French language. This would be a first step in the substitution from English to French as the language of instruction.

"As long as McGill University remains what it is, an increasing number of Quebecers will see it as a menace to their growth, as an obstacle to their liberation."

Michael Oliver, academic vice-principal of McGill, said in reply that McGill can best serve Quebec by remaining an English-language institution, but he added that it must deepen its involvement with the French language and culture.

"The notion that English-language students should go to an English-language university and French-language students to a French-language university is unlikely to stand up very long."

In Quebec City, Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal said last Friday that there is enough classroom space in Quebec's French- and English-language universities to accommodate "all worth-while candidates" this fall.

He said there are 70,600 places available in existing universities and that the new University of Quebec, opening in three centres this fall, will bring the number of places available to 80,300.

The number of undergraduates students in all Quebec universities this September, reached after subtracting the number expected to graduate this spring, will be about 39,100, he said.

The number of students expected to enter universities this fall was 20,000, including 13,500 French-speaking Quebecers.

Friday's planned demonstration has been endorsed by the McGill Radical Students Alliance, the Montreal Labor Council, the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire, student committees at seven French-language junior colleges in the Montreal area, students at the University of Montreal, the Union Generale des Etudiants, the Taxi Liberation Committee and the Front de Liberation Populaire.

Organizers say they expect between 5,000 to 10,000 persons in the 8 p.m. demonstration.

Mr. Shaw said McGill's existence is threatened by revolutionaries and separatists.

"It took 150 years to build . . . it can be destroyed overnight."

GUNNED DOWN IN BAR

MONTREAL (CP)—Police today identified James Collins, 29, as the man shot to death Tuesday night as he walked into a downtown tavern.

Police said Collins was followed into the tavern by another men who pointed a revolver at his head before Collins had a chance to sit down.

N.S. Legislature Rejects City's Bid to Lower Voting Age

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Nova Scotia legislature Tuesday rejected a bid from the city of Sydney to have its municipal voting age lowered to 18 from 21.

Six Conservatives voted with Liberal opposition members in favor of the bill, making the final vote 26 to 11.

Speaking against the motion, Premier G. I. Smith said he has "great faith" in the province's youth, but the motion should be defeated because it was an "isolated request." The question should be dealt with on a provincial basis.

In other legislatures:

St. John's—Opposition Leader Gerald Ottenheimer charged that a New York consulting firm hired by Newfoundland to produce an economic forecast has been out of business in everything but name for six years. The "whole thing is a waste of time and close to an attempted deception," he said.

Charlottetown — Agriculture Minister Daniel MacDonald said marketing under Prince Edward Island's development plan will be co-ordinated by a market-and-product development centre linked to government departments, to the proposed University of P.E.I. and to other related regional institutions. The centre will provide assistance to both primary producers and manufacturers.

Fredericton — Two government members spoke in the New Brunswick legislature in favor of continuance of the annual seal hunt. J. Fraser Kerr (L—Northumberland) said the campaign against the hunt is being waged by those "who know little of what they are discussing." H. Graham Crocker, minister without portfolio and chairman of the electric power commission, said the seal herd was becoming large enough to threaten the East Coast salmon fishing industry.

Quebec — Pierre Laporte, Liberal house leader, said members who cross the floor between elections should be required to give up their seats and run in a byelection. Three members have changed party affiliation since the last provincial election in June, 1966.

Toronto—Eighteen officers of the Ontario Humane Society arrived at the legislature in 17 cars and trucks to deliver petitions signed by 175,000 persons opposed to proposed legislation forcing shelters to surrender animals for scientific research.

Winnipeg—A resolution asking the federal and provincial governments to enter a cost-sharing agreement to pay for drying grain was defeated by a 26-24 margin in the Manitoba legislature.

Edmonton—William Tomyn (SC—Edmonton Norwood) introduced a motion that movies and cultural entertainment in Alberta be allowed on Sunday on a local-option basis. Debate was adjourned without a vote.

Yuban: it's still the richest, most delicious coffee in the world.

Here's 20¢ to prove it.

We're giving you 20¢ off Instant Yuban to let you prove something to yourself.
This: if your coffee isn't Yuban, it won't have Yuban's fabulous taste.

Why not? Because we pay the extra money for certain rare, rich South American coffee beans. (And the way we blend them is a deep, dark secret, too.)

What's more, Yuban's crystals taste more like fresh-perked coffee.
Take us up on our offer. And we'll both win.

Everyone Laughed ... And Got Stuck

TORONTO (CP) — It sounded like a good idea at the time, but a photography expedition by Harry Mason and Carl Hader turned into a disaster.

They drove down to Woodbine beach to get some pictures of the sunrise, but their car got stuck in the sand. They called a tow truck but it got stuck and broke down, forcing the driver to call another truck.

The second one came, pulled out the first, but refused to back into the sand far enough to get the photographers' car. They called a third tow truck.

•

Meanwhile, a policeman came down to see what was going on and his motorcycle stuck in the sand also.

The third truck came, got stuck, then tied his winch cable to a stump

The stump pulled out.

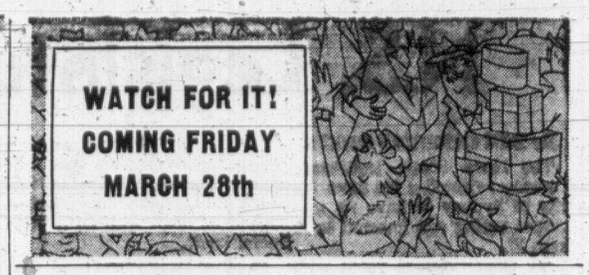

He finally got free, went back to a garage for a longer cable, came back and pulled out the policeman and the two photographers.

Total towing bill was $50 for the photographers and now their car brakes won't work. But after 10½ hours in the sand, they were glad to get out.

•

The photographs?

They forgot to take them, but they are going back next weekend—this time on foot.

Smallwood Under Fire

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Labrador member Tom Burgess attacked the Liberal government of Newfoundland Monday for "unkept" election promises and "political deceit" in what he called its neglect of the mainland provincial territory.

Mr. Burgess (Ind.—Labrador West) was making his first major speech in the legislature at St. John's since he unveiled plans for a new Labrador political party and crossed the floor as an independent last month after serving as a Liberal backbencher.

He said his one purpose now is to "establish a specific identity for Labrador." He criticized Premier Joseph Smallwood's "dogmatic" attitude in refusing the territory a road link with Quebec.

Mr. Burgess quoted the premier as saying no such road would be built supposing every one of Labrador's 13,000 residents wrote asking for it.

SELL WATER, SHRUM URGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, said Monday water is a renewable resource in vast quantities in B.C. and the province could make millions by exporting it.

The idea of selling water arose during a trip by Dr. Shrum to San Francisco as part of a team boosting B.C.

End of Cardinal System Seen

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the organization of Canada's Roman Catholic bishops says he foresees the day when there will be no more cardinals —the Pope will be advised by a changing panel of bishops delegated from around the world.

Most Rev. Alexander Carter, Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie, was answering questions at the Catholic Information Centre's Sunday-night talk series here.

In an earlier interview Sunday night the bishop explained his views:

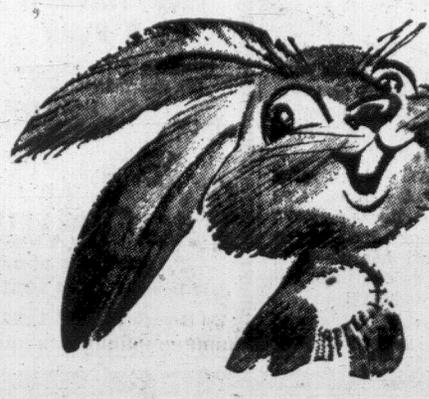

—Eventually the work now done by the cardinals will be taken over by a circle of bishops delegated by the churches of various countries.

—The bishops in the group may be chosen by some form of election within the church.

—The bishop, who would be sent for one meeting, would not necessarily be sent for the next. The council of bishops in any one country could choose an expert in a special field if that seemed called for.

—The bishops of the advising circle would not be distinguished by ceremonial marks of the red-hat kind.

"Even within the College of Cardinals there is a lot less ceremonial in their activities in recent years," said Bishop Carter.

N. Koreans Discouraged By U.S. Air Manoeuvre

By SELIG S. HARRISON

TOKYO (WP) — The massive paratroop airlift staged by the United States in South Korea and Okinawa last week was much more than a military exercise. It was a multipurpose political gesture designed to convey three separate but related messages to three distinct audiences.

For the South Koreans, who were the major target of U.S. attentions, the airlift offered an indirect but obvious reminder that the presence of two American infantry divisions may not be needed much longer to deal with possible North Korean aggression at a time when the Pentagon is constantly perfecting its rapid deployment capabilities.

The visible spectacle of combat-ready troops flying from North Carolina in 31 hours was a way of forewarning the North Koreans, at the same time, that the U.S. would not be "abandoning" Seoul even if the size of the American troop commitment in South Korea eventually is reduced.

American military men clearly hoped that the Japanese also would get an educative message from the role of Okinawa in the exercise strengthening the case for the return of the island without restrictions on the use of U.S. bases.

Main Theme

One of the main themes sounded in U.S. military circles here since the end of the demonstration has been that without the "free use" of Okinawa bases, the exercise would have been a flop, since snowy weather unexpectedly forced an entire airborne battalion to turn back from Seoul and to stop over for the night at Kadena Air Force Base before joining in the "attack."

The most striking aspect of the Seoul paradrops is not how much they demonstrated about increasing U.S. deployment capabilities but how little. While the C-141s and C-130s used still will have a role in future airlift operations, the main burden will be borne by the considerably faster and bigger C5A.

Even if bad weather had not held the exercise up and everything had gone precisely as planned, the time required to get 2,500 men and 77 planes from Fort Bragg to the battlefield south of Seoul would have been a full week. Both of the airborne battalions involved were equipped with howitzers and limited supporting equipment but did not have tanks or missiles, which C-141's cannot carry while they are also carrying troops.

Carries Jets

By contrast, the C-5A with its 35,000 cubic-foot cargo area can haul everything needed by an army combat divison along with troops and still fly at more than 500 miles per hour for more than 3,000 miles, or for twice the distance with half a load. The science fiction dimensions of the C-5A can be appriciated when one realizes that one plane can hold 14 supersonic figher planes or eight Greyhound buses..

Expert studies show that six C-5A squadrons could land an entire airborne division in Korea from the eastern U.S. within five days. With the help of the navy's projected fleet deployment logistics (FDL) ships, stalled by Congressional opposition for the past two years, this time could be cut to four days and would require a much smaller number of planes.

Defence department estimates indicating that C-54s are expected to come into use on a large scale in 1972 have a critical bearing on assessments of the future importance of Okinawa bases in the defence of South Korea. Six squadrons of C-54s could deploy an airborne division from Guam in less than two days whether or not the U.S. continues to have unrestricted access to Okinawa, and by "marrying up" C-5A and FDL arrivals, this could be reduced to 1.4 days.

Without the use of Okinawa, a fully-equipped infantry division with its tanks and other heavy equipment could be deployed from the continental U.S. in nine days. By drawing some troops from Guam and some from the U.S., depending on troop availability, the same division could be deployed within 3.6 days.

Extra Margin

Aside from the fact that the operational use of the C-54s is still several years away and that the FDL "floating arsenals" have become a congressional storm centre, many U.S. military men contend that Okinawan bases will be needed, in any case, to provide an extra margin of efficiency and dependability.. They argue that a Japanese veto power over the use of the bases could cripple their effectiveness in emergencies.

Japanese opponents of a "free use" formula reply that the ruling conservative regime is virtually certain to permit unrestricted use, in practice, and that "free use" in the face of Japanese government opposition would mean little, anyway, since an unsympathetic host government can easily make foreign bases untenable.

Not surprisingly, Pentagon advocates of unrestricted U.S. bases are finding enthusiastic support from the South Koreans, who are planning to propose a resolution at the Bangkok conference of Vietnam allies in May reaffirming the importance of Okinawa in Far Eastern defence strategy.

Seoul has watched uneasily as balance of payments worries and the desire not to tie down too many troops in a single theatre have led to increasing U.S. sentiment for cutting back U.S. forces.

Korean Fears

American reassurances that airlift facilities are rapidly improving have added to Korean fears that a change is in prospect. Few tears were shed in Seoul when previously scheduled airlift exercises were called off twice for fear of upsetting negotiations on the release of the Pueblo crew. Even those officials in Seoul who are reconciled to the inevitability of an eventual reduction in the U.S. troop presence say that this can be absorbed in South Korea, psychologically, only if the U.S. keeps its unrestricted use of Okinawa bases.

Real Estate Agent Briefs Californians

LOS ANGELES — Californians were invited Tuesday to participate with "fresh ideas and technology" in the development of the B.C. frontier.

Some 300 members of the Jonathan Breakfast Club were addressed by Victoria real estate agent Eric Charman, who is part of a government-sponsored mission to the state in aid of 1969 tourist promotion.

He outlined B.C. business opportunities as well as tourist attractions in his presentation to the club, many of whose members are influential businessmen.

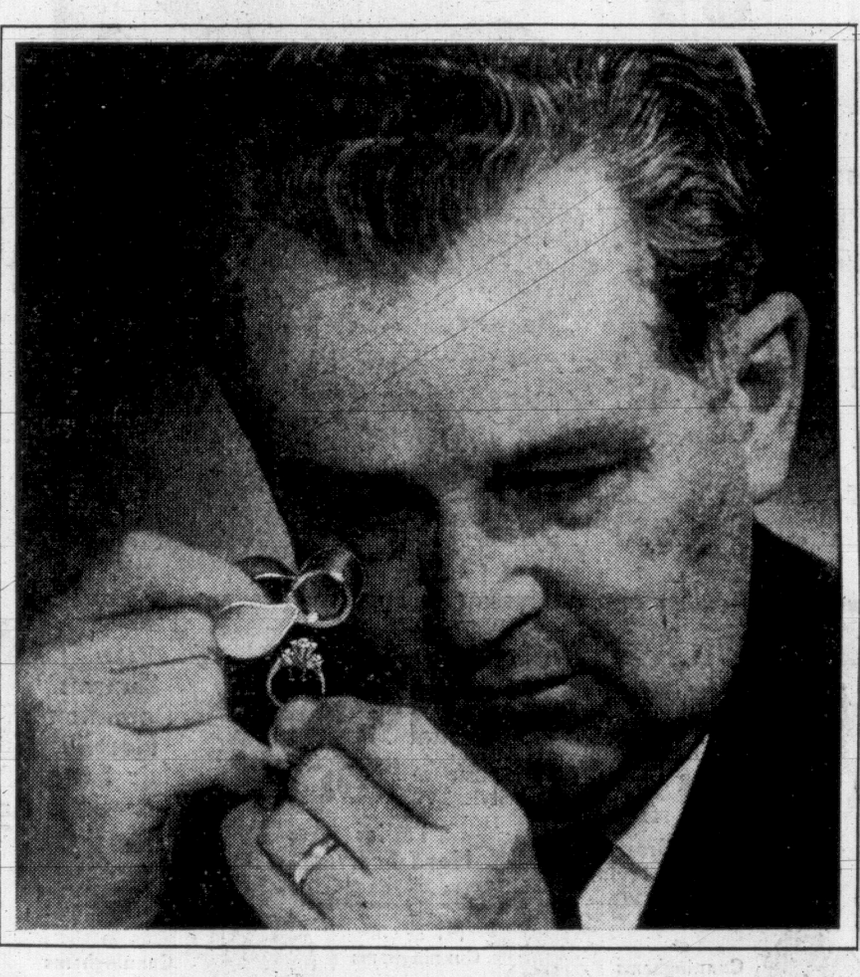

Charman noted the growing number of California cars which cross the provincial border during the tourist season, which has risen to become the second most important B.C. industry.

He is one of 60 people from Victoria, Vancouver and parts of the interoir who are paying their own expenses — or are sent by their companies — on the five-day mission organized by deputy minister of travel industry Ron Worley. Worley and Canadian consul-general J. G. McEntyre were at the club meeting.

Mainland Musician Rejoins Amateurs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Can a young man whose teapot tootling helped make Winchester Cathedral a hit recording find true happiness with an all-amateur group in suburban Delta?

Peter Cooper of the madcap New Vaudeville Band — he's the lead teapot player — hopes so but first he must overcome prejudice against him because he is a professional.

Cooper, 22, who moved to Delta when the band shifted operations from Britain to Vancouver, would like to unwind from the pressure of big-time show business by playing trumpet with the amateurs.

"They're a great bunch of cats," Cooper says of the Delta musicians, who range in age from nine to 80.

". . . They play just about the whole range from show music to marching tunes. It's a refreshing change of pace for me, and a marvellous way for me to relax."

RETURN ENTHUSIASM

The Delta band is equally enthusiastic over Cooper, a top trumpet player and trained classical musician.

The snag is at least one amateur band in the Fraser Valley, east of Vancouver, has objected to the teapot player entering local competitions because rules bar members of the Musicians Union.

Bob Herriot, bandmaster for the Delta band, said Cooper is a member of Actors Equity, the actors' union, and not the Musicians Union.

Herriot said he is canvassing other bands the Delta group competes against to see how they feel about Cooper joining the group.

"One band has objected," he said.

The New Vaudeville Band has toured all over the world.

The Delta group competes in such Vancouver-area communities as Coquitlam, Abbotsford and West Vancouver.

Four Miners Killed

LENS, France (Reuters) — Four coal miners were killed and a fifth seriously injured Monday when an elevator plunged 300 feet down a shaft at nearby Leforest. A coal board spokesman said the men were going down to work in the elevator despite a ban on its use.

GLEASON TO FILM IN QUEBEC CITY

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — This oldest North American city, long a favorite of movie-makers on the hunt for scenic backgrounds, becomes the setting for another movie next week but the old town may not recover from this film-making epic.

Jackie Gleason leads a cast of stars who arrive here March 31 to begin work on a comedy, "Don't Drink the Water," adapted from the stage hit by comic Woody Allen. Estelle Parsons, who won an Academy Award last year for her role in Bonnie and Clyde, will play the female lead opposite Gleason.

In Your Weekend Magazine:

ESPOSITO
the new superstar

They used to call him the garbage goal collector, but now they call him a superstar. Because Phil Esposito is the highest scoring centre in the history of the NHL; the first man to reach the 100-point level in league play; and a first-team All-Star. And this year the Boston Bruins are leading contenders for the Stanley Cup because of him. But Esposito worries. Weekend Magazine's Patrick Nagle tells why in "Hockey's Happy Worrier", this week.

France Sees Invasion Of Czechs 'Defensive'

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-term implications of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia are still a subject of lively debate, and some disagreement, within the Atlantic alliance.

Differences of interpretation of the stroke against Czechoslovakia form part of the political framework in which the government has to decide Canada's future policy towards NATO.

A decision on continued Canadian membership in the NATO alliance is expected to be made following meetings of the cabinet this weekend.

The Commons committee on defence and external affairs, in its recent fact-finding tour of Europe, heard conflicting opinions about the danger to peace inherent in the Czechoslovak situation.

In France, the prevailing assessment appeared to be that the August 20 invasion was a preventive rather than an offensive operation—designed to preserve the Soviet position rather than expand Soviet power.

The French deemed their formula for achieving an East-West settlement—a relaxation of tensions, then a move towards understanding and finally co-operation—as valid in the wake of the Soviet attack as before.

In Britain and West Gerhany, on the other hand, there is a far greater tendency to question assumptions about the possibility of getting along with the Soviet Union.

SEES MORE DANGER

In London, Defence Minister Denis Healey told the committee the danger of more explosions like that of Czechoslovakia is increasing. If NATO is unable to protect itself there is a real possibility that conflict will spill over into the West "and then we would be up a creek," he declared.

The danger of a spillover into the West from uprisings in eastern Europe was also pounded home to committee members by German spokesmen.

And at NATO headquarters in Brussels, officials said the Czechoslovak story has still not run its course.

Apprehension is felt in the Belgian capital over the so-called Brezhnev doctrine, also variously referred to as the doctrine of limited sovereignty or that of the "Socialist commonwealth."

In a speech in Warsaw last November, First Secretary Leonid Brezhnev of the Soviet Communist party stated:

". . . When the internal and external forces hostile to socialism seek to turn back the development of any Socialist country towards the restoration of the capitalist order, when a threat to the cause of socialism in that country, a threat to the security of the Socialist community as a whole emerges, this is no longer only a problem of the people of that country but also a common problem, of concern for all Socialist countries.

AROUSES ANXIETIES

"It goes without saying that such an action as military aid to a fraternal country to thwart the threat to the Socialist order is an extraordinary, enforced measure."

NATO foreign ministers, meeting at Brussels just a few days after Brezhnev spoke, declared that the doctrine he enunciated "is dangerous to European security and has inevitably aroused grave anxieties."

"It gives rise to fears of a further use of force in other cases."

The feeling in Brussels is that further upheavals in eastern Europe are likely, and some could pose a more urgent threat to the military balance in Europe than did the events in Czechoslovakia last August.

It is in this context particularly that the Brezhnev doctrine presents "an accrued risk for peace," the argument runs.

The Canadian policy seems to be to emphasize points of agreement among the allies rather than differences.

Officials here draw attention to the fact that France joined with other members of the Western alliance in the Brussels declaration last November.

The declaration said that while prospects for balanced East-West force reductions had suffered a severe setback as a result of Czechoslovakia, "the political goal remains that of secure, peaceful and mutually beneficial relations between East and West."

One of Canada's chief concerns at the moment is to promote talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union on the limitation of strategic weapons.

Pierre's Image Haunts Tories

OTTAWA (CP)—Remember Pierre Elliott Trudeau kissing young women, swapping comments with university students in their own vernacular and winning the 1968 election?

So do the Conservatives and New Democrats.

The opposition election scars appeared to be a main reason for a Commons debate Tuesday in which the Conservatives selected manpower policies, student manpower in particular, as the vehicle for a confidence test of Mr. Trudeau's Liberal government.

The government forces easily handled the test, voting down the motion 119 to 83.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield proposed the motion and, in the debate, appeared to tip off one of his party's main reasons for selecting this topic when he said:

". . . It is almost unbelievable that this government came to power last year with the support of so many young Canadians."

The motion contended the government had "not provided for the development and retention of manpower resources in Canada and, in particular, of student manpower resources."

GIVES HIS REASONS

Mr. Stanfield said he launched the debate to shake the government from its lethargy and also to let students know that Parliament is concerned about them.

Allan MacEachen, the manpower and immigration minister, said he was surprised that the manpower topic had been selected.

Canada had been recognized through the free world as a leader in policies to promote full use of manpower resources.

The Trudeau government and the previous Liberal regime under Lester B. Pearson had done more to mobilize manpower than any Canadian government since Confederation.

To say that the present government had been hesitant or reluctant to face manpower problems was "to fly in the face of the facts," the minister said.

The New Democrats offered an amendment to expand the scope of the Conservative non-confidence motion.

Proposed by Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby), the amendment added a statement of regret that the government had showed "reliance on the unplanned private sector" of the economy instead of stressing the public sector in aiming for full use of manpower resources.

That one went down by a vote of 184 to 14, with only the NDP members in favor.

Mr. Stanfield said 88,000 students will be leaving Canadian universities and colleges this spring and there is not "a shred of evidence" that the federal government has done any planning to facilitate their entry into the work force.

"Is there anybody in government who knows or even cares?"

The federal government should be talking to the provinces to find out just how these new workers could be fitted into the productive machinery of the country.

Mr. Broadbent said it is time someone started riding herd on the big corporations in Canada. They were controlling the country's economy.

They were so big that no one any longer held control over the prices they charged. They didn't need the normal money market to finance their operations.

'CAN'T CONTROL THEM'

In effect, Mr. Broadbent said, they are outside government control.

It was time the government told some of these corporations what it expected them to do.

For instance, Mr. Broadbent said, the government should speak to corporations that want to invest money in office buildings. They should be told there is a housing shortage and a percentage of their investment should go to houses rather than new offices.

Mr. MacEachen said the "brain drain" from Canada to the United States is being reduced. Canada's net loss to the U.S. in 1967 had dipped to 16,000, compared with 39,000 in 1963.

TURNER
. . . setback on breath law

Kahn-Tineta Scolded By Judge

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Kahn-Tineta Horn, pretty Indian fashion model, was scolded Tuesday for trying to confuse witnesses when she appeared in court on two charges laid after a five-hour blockade of the nearby Seaway International Bridge last December.

For one session of the court, Miss Horn came dressed in a white leather mini-skirt, white sweater and red Indian headband, but for a later session she turned up wearing a jacket.

Judge Philip Baker told her she couldn't try to confuse witnesses by changing her clothes. Once, she removed her headband so police could identify her.

Miss Horn, from the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal, was charged with obstructing police and possession of an offensive weapon after Indians from the nearby St. Regis reserve blocked the bridge Dec. 18 to protest the imposition of customs duties on goods brought back by Indians from the United States.

The Indians claim that under the Jay Treaty of 1794 they do not have to pay duty.

Gross Indecency Charges Halted for Homosexuals

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee approved a Criminal Code amendment Tuesday that would exempt homosexuals from prosecution for gross indecency.

The proposed exemption would apply only to cases in which two consenting adults are acting in private, however.

The Code now provides up to 14 years in prison for the offence of buggery and a homosexual can be convicted of gross indecency and sent to prison for five years.

The committee also changed, despite opposition by Justice Minister John Turner, the penalties for the new breath-test clauses in the Code.

The breath-test clauses would make it an offence to have an alcohol level of eight one-hundredths of one per cent in the blood, and to refuse a breath analysis to establish the blood alcohol reading.

SUPPORT AMENDMENT

The government bill originally made the maximum penalties the same as those for impaired driving: A fine of up to $500 and possibly three months in jail for a first offence, with compulsory jail sentences for remaining offences.

However, five Liberals and four Conservatives supported an amendment by C. Terrence Murphy (L—Sault Ste. Marie) to soften this.

The Murphy amendment would make an .08 blood alcohol level or refusal to take the test summary offences only. The Crown can lay charges in cases of impaired driving

It would also set out the penalties as a minimum of a $50 fine and a maximum of $1,000 and six months in jail.

Dealing with abortion earlier, the committee heard Dr. Benoit Lesage of Quebec City and Dr. Rene Jutras of Athabasca, Que., testify that life begins at birth.

They say present abortion law is broad enough to deal with the dwindling number of cases in which abortion is necessary to save a mother's life.

Proposed Criminal Code amendments would permit therapeutic abortion where a hospital committee certified that the mother's life or health was endangered by continued pregnancy.

WATCHDOG HE IS NOT

PENTICTON (CP) — When Donald Vass parked his car on a downtown street, he left his Airedale dog in the back seat to discourage thieves.

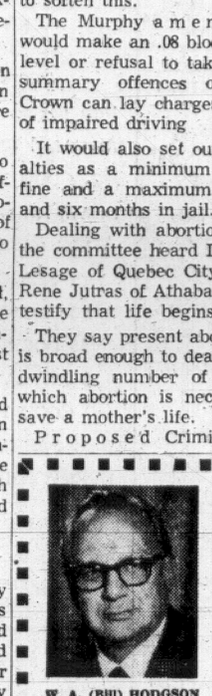

Four hours later, he reported the car stolen.

Police found the car Tuesday about a mile north of this Okanagan city—with the Airedale curled up asleep on the back seat.

POSTAL SLOWDOWN CAUSES BIG BACKLOG

MONTREAL (CP)—An agreement has been reached in a dispute that has caused a mail backlog of more than 100,000 parcels in Montreal, it was reported Tuesday.

A city postal official said the backlog of parcels, due to a slowdown of mobile mail delivery, has topped the 100,000-mark.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HALL—Cherished memory of a dear husband and father, Frank, who passed away March 26, 1964.
In memory a daily thought,
In heart a silent sorrow.
—Remembered by his wife and son Bob.

HIGGS—In ever-loving memory of of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Horace Higgs, who departed from this earth March 26, 1966.
Gone from us but never forgotten.
—Your loving wife, daughter and grandson, Rose, Kathie and Horace.

GADSBY—In loving memory of a dear nephew Tod Gadsby, who was taken from us so suddenly on March 26, 1965.
Four years have passed since that day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home—it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by Aunt Barbara and Uncle Harry.

McCONACHIE—In loving memory of my dear husband David McConachie.
Dear husband David McConachie,
I have lost my soul's companion,
And day by day I miss him more,
As I walk through life alone.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife and daughter.

NEWER OAK BAY

This is a choice home, in a choice location close to University, High and Elementary schools. The owner waited a long time to buy in this area, and now he has been promoted. The lovely living room is 13x17 with inside corner fireplace with thermopane glass enclosure. This is in-line with a 13x13 dining room with the loveliest canle globed fixture. The kitchen with nook is 15x15, including wall oven and counter top stove. Beyond is a handy utility area plumbed for W.D. The bedrooms are large; 13x13; 12x13, 11x12, plus an area in the basement for a fourth. The cosy family room is 10x20, all nicely panelled and tiled on a raised floor. The basement is high, bright plumbing in basement. When you drive by, the house may seem small but it is 1,350 sq. ft. on a 75x150 lot, all landscaped and fenced in rear. With cash to mortgage the payments are $134 on a private 9 per cent mortgage with no term! Asking $33,900. May be refinanced with no penalty on payout of the existing mortgage. Try $8,000 down.

Pipers To Have Their Night

Bay Street Armoury will echo to the skirl of bagpipes Saturday as the Vancouver Island Pipers Club holds its Vancouver Night.

Guests from Seattle and Portland will be on hand for the occasion as the Vancouver Pipers Club puts on a program designed to stress the recreational rather than the competitive aspects of piping.

It's the kind of activity that includes members aged 8 to 80, said H. A. Davey, spokesman for the Island group.

The event, to begin at 8 p.m. will feature theme piper, William Elder; guest player, Rory Macdonald; pupil of the month, Terry Lee; and master-of-ceremonies, William Lamont, all of Vancouver.

HOPE SEEN FOR STEAM CARS

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Senate commerce committee made a move toward a new automotive era Tuesday with the release of a staff report terming steam cars efficient, practical and the best hope in sight for a drastic reduction in air pollution.

Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D—Wash.) praised the report as "extremely useful" and "solid and provacative."

The most far-reaching recommendation is for legislation to foster development of steam cars by requiring the federal government — a major buyer — to limit its purchases to cars with low emission of pollutants.

The report is based on hearings held jointly by the commerce committee and Sen. Edmund D. Muskie's (D — Maine) air and water pollution subcommittee, and on staff investigations.

"The Rankine (or steam) cycle propulsion system is a satisfactory alternative to the present internal combustion system in terms of performance and a far superior engine in terms of emission," the report concluded.

The automobile now accounts for more than 60 per cent of all air pollution in the U.S. (and for 85 per cent in some urban areas) and for 90 per cent of all carbon monoxide pollution.

Bergman Play Riles Swedes

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — A television play by famed movie director Ingmar Bergman, which included eroticism, sadistic whipping and potent dialogue, led to a flurry of protests in Sweden today.

MARKING her 35th year with the Royal Ballet, Margot Fonteyn, 49, will whirl on stage tonight at London's Covent Garden in a gala performance to be witnessed by the Queen.

The Swedish Broadcasting Co. was bombarded with calls from outraged viewers after showing of the play Tuesday night, in which a bare-breasted girl makes wild, hysterical love to a judge, who dies.

Bergman, one of the world's best-known movie directors, told viewers before it started that any one who was the least bit sensitive should read a good book instead of watching.

The play, written and financed by Bergman in his television debut, was screened simultaneously in Denmark, Norway and Finland while United States, Dutch and West German television have asked about the possibility of buying it.

Entitled The Rite, it depicts the lives of three travelling mime artists in a Roman Catholic country who are accused of obscenity in their show.

GETS PRIVATE SHOW

The judge demands a private performance in his office late one evening, and the artists—played by Bergman movie regulars Erik Hell, Gunnar Bjoernstrand and Ingrid Thulin—take the opportunity to revenge themselves on the censor, the critic and the spokesman of a bourgeois society that contains everything they despise.

The scene opens with the lashing of the judge's feet and culminates in the love scene with the bare-breasted girl.

Earlier, the girl makes love to one of the artists—although Bergman portrays it by perfectly studied suggestion—in a scene described by some viewers as the most permissive ever allowed on a television screen.

The dialogue, too, leaves little to the imagination.

The play ends with short screened sentences saying: "Dr. Abrahamsson (the judge) really died. The three artists were accused of his murder, taken to court and fined. Then they went away for a summer holiday."

Stanwyck Legend Also a Myth

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jack Benny is stingy, Dean Martin is steadily stoned, and Barbara Stanwyck adores work. These legends seem a permanent part of the Hollywood landscape; like all legends, they aren't necessarily so.

Benny donates his talent and money to symphony orchestras and other causes. Dino himself admits he couldn't do all the things he does if he were permanently plastered.

And now, another legend is shot to pieces as Stanwyck confesses:

"There are some mornings when I feel like saying to hell with it and going back to sleep. Work—who needs it?"

Miss Stanwyck's feelings can be understood when she explains that for most weekday mornings from May to February for the past four years, she has been required to arise at 4:30 a.m., sometimes earlier if location scenes are required. Such are the conditions under which she has labored for the television series, The Big Valley.

All that may or may not be over. After four seasons, The Big Valley, Miss Stanwyck admits, is in trouble.

MAY CHANGE TIME

"We've had a rough year," she said. "We had terrific competition and the ratings haven't been what they should be. There's talk that, if we are renewed, the show will be moved to an earlier time period.

"I hope so. History has proved that westerns do better in earlier time periods. The only exception to that was Gunsmoke. Then, when Gunsmoke seemed at an end and it was cancelled, the public protest was so great that it was revived and moved to an early evening time. And now it's as strong as it ever was."

Miss Stanwyck is hoping that The Big Valley will enjoy the same kind of rejuvenation.

"I'd like to see the show go five years," she remarked. "That's a nice, respectable length for a television show—in fact, it's getting to be rather rare. Naturally I like to be associated with a winner. I've had my experience with being a loser in television."

FIRST SHOW FAILED

She smiled ruefully, recalling the Barbara Stanwyck Show of the 1960-61 season. It produced the remarkable record of providing her with an Emmy and a cancellation in the first season.

If the network should renew The Big Valley, it will mean a return to the monastic life for Barbara Stanwyck. Her weekdays and nights are absorbed by the series. If she doesn't shoot late on Friday, as is often the case, she allows herself a splurge; watching movies at the home of Nancy Sinatra Sr.

Ballet's Ban On Sideburns Splits Hair?

TORONTO (CP) — A refusal by Howard Marcus to shave off his sideburns has cost him his job with the National Ballet.

The 19-year-old dancer said Tuesday he was asked by the company's artistic director, Celia Franca, to shave off the sideburns before a recent performance of Cinderella, and when he refused he was not permitted to perform.

He said a letter to Actors' Equity stated that his appearance on stage with sideburns would downgrade the artistic standards of the ballet.

"When a pair of sideburns puts someone's professional career in jeopardy, I think it's just ... splitting hairs," he said.

Marcus had been with the company for more than four years.

Budget Increase Recommended For Oak Bay

A committee of Oak Bay council proposed a $15,600 addition to the 1969 municipal budget Tuesday for new water meters, hydrants and services.

Also discussed was addition to the size of the Oak Bay Marina parking area. The committee also recommended, at request of police, that a 15-mile-per-hour speed limit be introduced on Barkley Terrace, because of its widing nature.

LEWIS

SORRY ABOUT THAT

NEW YORK (UPI) — Comedian Jerry Lewis apologized Tuesday night for a comment he made on the Tonight Show which raised a furor in Mississippi.

Lewis, substituting for vacationing Johnny Carson on the NBC network show, said in his opening monologue Monday night that he fulfilled a lifetime ambition by "using the bathroom while flying over Mississippi."

Governor John Bell Williams and a Mississippi congressman called for a suspension of the show until an apology was made.

CUE CARD

A spokesman for Lewis said the comedian had read the remark from a cue card prepared by the Tonight staff and since he had had no rehearsal, did not know what he was going to say until it was said.

The spokesman said Lewis was "genuinely sorry" about the remark but would take the entire responsibility for having said it.

SECOND TIME

It was the second time a substitute host caused a commotion with his opening monologue. Bill Cosby last week wound up apologizing for a routine about a Protestant entering a Catholic church for the first time.

Williams called Lewis' remark a "bigoted, gratuitous, vulgar insult" and Rep. Charles Griffin, D—Miss., called it "an obscene affront to the morals of the nation and an inexcusable insult to the people of my state."

Endowment Concert Varied, Thoroughly Enjoyable

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The second annual Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm G. Taylor Scholarship Endowment Concert Tuesday night was enjoyable entertainment, excellently balanced and varied.

The recital was presented by the University of Victoria and Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Linn Hendry and Brian Warner represented the music students for whom scholarships, thus endowed, are intended.

Hindemith's moody evocative Sonata No. 2 for piano allowed Miss Hendry to show her sensitive understanding of the complex work in a beautiful interpretative performance.

Power, controlled, but inevitably building into peaking climaxes, underlay the work and they young pianist skilfully let the crashing chords grow, naturally and unimpeded, under her hands.

The dance-like rhythm and contention between the hands brought a lighter touch to the second movement, and the dreamy opening chords were echoed, this time with darker undertones, in the meditative, atmosphere-laden third movement.

Brian Warner, (accompanied by Linn Hendry), had chosen wisely when he selected Rossini's Variations for Clarinet for his contribution to the program.

With excellent control of his instrument he gave it a thorough workout in the jolly, ever-varied, fast-paced variations.

The rhythm was well-maintained in the demanding passage work and ornamental details were executed with finesse by this skilled clarinet player.

The tempestuous intensity of Brahms' Piano Trio in C Minor Op 101, was admirably captured by Jack Kessler (violin) James Hunter (cello) and Robin Wood (piano).

The energetic, almost fierce, musical involvement of the players in the outer movements was enhanced by the contrasting tiptoe stalking of the presto and the sustained sun-warmed melodic mood of the third movement.

A Sonata for Flute and Continuo by Locatelli opened the program. In this, Jan Menting was well supported by James Hunter's restrained cello and firm harpsichord continuo provided by Hugh McClean.

The Largo not only produced a more interesting continuo part than the other movements but was remarkable for the lovely tone with which Menting sustained the melodic line.

After performing a classically clean, well-matched Sonata in A Major for Piano Duet by J. C. Bach, Robin Wood and Winifred Scott, again in duet played three pieces from Jeux d'enfants by Bizet.

With carnival gaiety they bounded through the first movement and reached the final chord in a photo-finish. The loping, off-beat melody of Petit Mari, Petite Femme, gave pause before they embarked on the perpetual rolling of Le Bal which they followed unerringly to its final triumphant stop.

The five Bagatelles which Gerald Hendrie composed in 1965 were played with convincing authority by the composer. Lightly programmed so that a three-four beat identified Waltz and a campanilian tinge marked Carillon, these short, carefully constructed pieces were interesting to listen to.

Most satisfying of the five to the non-mathematician, was Passacaglia, probably because of the recurring bass line to which chords advanced and retreated in shapely, traceable progressions.

Prison Term Extended

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Eugene Albert Dale, 33, of Vancouver, was given an additional two-year sentence when he pleaded guilty in County Court to possession of stolen goods. He already is serving 15 years for armed robbery.

Mom and Dad To Show Results Of Night School

Who says mom and dad haven't been busy at those night classes?

Crafts and skills from wood carving to cake decorating will be in display this weekend as students from Greater Victoria's adult education division present their second annual art, hobby and crafts show.

It will be in the Ewing Building, at Lansdowne and Richmond, Friday from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Saturday noon to 3:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Among displays: flower arranging, pottery, sculpture, crewel embroidery, clay modelling and sculpture, batik and tie dyeing and plastic casting.

'LESS NATIONAL'

OTTAWA (CP) — The capital's $46,000,000 national arts centre will not be able to serve Canadians as well as it had hoped during its first year of operation because of a budget cutback, its director-general said Tuesday.

Hamilton Southam told the Commons committee on assistance to the arts that the cutback from a proposed budget of $2,800,000 to $2,500,000 would mean that the centre "will be somewhat less national in scope and more carefully restricted to the national capital."

HOME GARDEN

Making Notes on Color

By HILDA BEASTALL

Plant groupings which give memorable color in a garden during March are surely worthy of being entered into the notebook.

Some day the need may arise for just such a group to brighten a small area where perhaps one large shrub is removed. Flower color of three of the plants is pink; a strong purplish rose if you will, but against dark green foliage it looks good in March.

Hilda

Tallest are the branches of Daphne mezereum, every twig closely packed with tiny scented blossoms. Spreading around its bare stems is a mat of pink winter heather, Erica darleyensis. Both plants get along well in a gravelly soil over clay.

Nearby are a couple of large plants of Bergenia cordifolia. The leathery purple-green leaves remained unharmed beneath the snow, and now thick fleshy stems of exquisite pink blossoms are rising a foot above the big leaves.

A different note of color and a daintier form is introduced with a few plants of dark purple-blue Iris reticulata.

These gems are only six inches high and intensely fragrant. The small corms have survived in this grouping for many years, and lately have been joined by self-sown seedlings of sweet scented violet, now adding their quota of beauty.

The whole picture has much charm in spring sunshine, and is just as gay on rainy days which cannot be said for some of the more delicate and rare plants.

After dark, there is perfume in abundance for the daphne is particularly free with its gifts at that time.

YOUR HEALTH

Prolonging Process Of Dying

By Dr. WALTER ALVAREZ

It is sad that today some physicians feel it their moral duty to keep a dying patient alive as long as possible, perhaps with tube feeding of intravenous feeding, artificial respiration, and stimulation of the heart. Sometimes a half dead man can thus be kept alive for several weeks or months, or in a few cases, I have heard of an unconscious man's having been kept alive for years; but this seemed to be cruel and utterly useless. All it did was to ruin the family financially.

Alvarez

As Dr. C. W. Mayo said in his fine autobiography, "Mayo: The Story of My Family and My Career" (Doubleday), he much did not want to be kept alive after he was dying. I am sure the Pope was right when some years ago he said that we doctors are supposed to prolong life, but never to prolong the process of dying.

★ ★ ★

Of late, there has been much written about the need for keeping people alive as long as possigle, and for using electroencephalograms (records of the tiny electric currents that are constantly running through the brain) to see if there still is some life left in the brain. What I wish everyone knew is that after five minutes of no breathing and absolutely no pulse, the best part of the person's brain—the part with which a man thinks and sees and maintains consciousness—is usually gone and permanently gone; it has turned into a scar, and there is no sense in keeping the man alive as a human vegetable.

One great difficulty that I see with much of the present-day discussion is the failure of some lawyers and churchmen and many physicians to see what I feel keenly after nearly 64 years of practice, and this is, why struggle desperately to keep a man alive for a few weeks or months longer when he has nothing to live for—when perhaps his body is riddled with cancer or tuberculosis or some other terrible disease.

I have never forgotten the lesson I learned in 1905 when I was an intern in a huge city hospital, and I struggled to ease the great pain of a fine old tailor who for months had been in my ward, dying slowly of a widely scattered tuberculosis. One morning he called me and said, "I hoped I was really dying last night, and I was happy about it; but then you sent and gave me that medicine that gave me a night's sleep and thus brought me back to life.

"As a result, I have to die all over again, and I hate the process. I wish you had left me in peace. What did you want to keep me alive for? I have absolutely nothing to live for, or to look forward to; so the next time I start to die, be a good fellow and leave me alone."

★ ★ ★

I thought of this patient when recently I read of a prominent physician in Stockholm, Dr. Clarence Crafoord, who said, "It is surely cruel and almost criminal to keep a person alive when there is irreversible (incurable) brain damage; doctors should not try to save a patient when he is merely a corpse." By irreversible damage a doctor means the brain injury, produced perhaps by a terrible stroke or a bad auto accident, which cannot be repaired; and hence the person cannot recover his senses and his old comfort of living.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Two Famous Vessels Had Same Birthday

By BOB BOWMAN

Two famous Canadian ships were launched March 26, although in different years. The Royal William was launched at Quebec in 1831, and the Bluenose at Lunenburg in 1921, exactly 90 years later.

Bowman

The Royal William was the first ship to cross the North Atlantic using only steam power, although she was equipped with sails in case of a breakdown. The Royal William was designed to operate from Quebec to Halifax and Boston, and was the first British steamship to enter an American port.

Unfortunately the service lost money and so the "smoke-belching, paddle-wheeling, clanking steam kettle" was sold to interests in England.

The trip from Pictou, N.S., to London took 25 days. Eventually the steamer was converted into a warship and sold to Spain.

The Bluenose had a happier career although a tragic end on a reef of Haiti in 1946. She was a two-masted fishing schooner built entirely of Canadian materials except her masts, which were Oregon pine.

FREAKISH HULL

The Bluenose became Canada's challenger in international schooner races and took on the best from U.S. fishing ports without ever being defeated. It was said that her great speed was due to something freakish about her hull, an accident of building. Her designer, W. J. Roue of Halifax, built other ships to try to defeat her, but never succeeded.

In 1935 the Bluenose crossed the Atlantic to take part in Silver Jubilee celebrations for King George V and was invited to race against the fastest schooners in Britain, designed for racing, not fishing. Even so she came in third.

Canadian 10-cent coins commemorate the Bluenose, and a replica cruise ship now sails from Halifax.

Other events March 26:

1616 — Explorers Bylow and Baffin sailed from England into Arctic.

1789 — Pictou Academy was founded.

1821 — Hudson's Bay Company and North West Company were amalgamated.

1874 — First session of Canada's Third Parliament expelled Louis Riel who had been elected as member for Provencher, Man.

1940 — Liberals, challenged by Liberal Premier Hepburn of Ontario, won general election.

1956 — Prime Minister St. Laurent held conference with U.S. President Eisenhower and President Cortines of Mexico.

1961 — Snowstorms caused state of emergency in Prince Edward Island.

The results of experiments carried out in 1943 have shown that the fastest messages transmitted by the nervous system travel at 265 miles an hour.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Mike Godin, age 14, of Gorham, Maine, for his question:

Who invented money?

Perhaps you have personal reasons for wanting to find the fellow who first invented money. Maybe you would like to hang his picture upside down, facing the wall. A lot of people would sympathize with you, but unfortunately there is no picture of this ingenious inventor. In fact, we have not the slightest notion who he was or when and where he lived.

The search for the inventor of money would take us back to the predawn of human history. The whole thing began in a very simple way and the inventor had no idea that his system would grow through the ages into such a stupendous system. At the time, no doubt, it seemed a good idea to simplify the swapping and bartering of various items from person to person. Swapping is probably as old as the human family. The cavemen of the ancient Paleolithic period of history made a living where they could. Hunters prowled where game was plentiful and fishermen fished by the streams. When groups were not scrapping for territory, hunters most likely swapped surplus meat and skins for surplus fish and shells from the shore dwellers.

Mankind is a born trader, and no doubt the swapping involved a measure of bickering and bartering. This sort of thing went on through untold ages before recorded history. The change to a sort of money system occurred long ages before our ancestors learned to read and write. The change was so simple that everybody must have wondered why nobody thought of it before. Actually many other groups had thought of it and others would think of it in the future. Hence, the idea of using money was invented by many different people on different occasions.

Traded in Beads

As you can see, a barter system needs a measuring unit—a special commodity with a standard value agreed upon by both wheelers and dealers. The unit of value must be something rather rare, not just an ordinary stone that anybody can pick up in the fields. In the earliest money systems, it also was something valuable and desirable in itself. In North American, the early hunters collected skins and more skins. Their womenfolk went to a lot of trouble to prepare and even decorate them. Animal hides were used for clothing and tepees, to make warm blankets and cover canoes.

It was logical for these hunting societies to use a money system based on animal skins. When trading with their neighbors, a good knife was worth so many skins and the knife trader went off knowing that the skins could be used to purchase so much of something else he needed. The American Indians also spent tedious hours creating fine beads from shells. These colored beads had trading value. They were woven into artistic bands of wampum and used as money. In the Old World, our early ancestors used money systems based on hides and rare shells, painted stones and various other items to which they gave standard values.

Finally, the civilizations of the Old World got around to basing their money systems on gold. It was a glamorous metal to behold and rare enough to have great value. Gold turned a page of ancient history. But still we do not know who invented the golden age of money or where and when it began.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Mary L. De Blasi, age 9, of Somerset, New Jersey, for her question:

How are craters formed?

A crater is a round hole in the ground that may be very wide and very deep. To look at it, you might imagine that a stupendous giant balled up his fist and slammed it down bang into the earth. Of course, this is not how a crater is created, but something very like a giant punch may have caused it. There are two different kinds of craters. One kind is formed when a huge meteor falls down from the sky like a giant fireball. The meteor is a whopping chunk of heavy minerals and it whacks the ground with a thundering thud. Its terrific fall punches a great crater in the ground.

Another kind of crater has its beginning way down inside the earth. A deep pool of melted rock forms maybe miles below the ground. This is a buried pool of magma. When it finds a crack in the crusty roocks above it, it comes seething up to the surface. This, of course, is a volcanic eruption. The molten magma cools and builds a cone of cindery lava rock around the crack. The deep hole at the top of the cone is a crater. It stays there long after the volcano stops erupting.

Key Satellite Issue Deadlocked

By ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — The largest international conference ever held at the state department has ended without settling the key issue before it: How to organize a global network of communications satellites.

Nevertheless, the conference's chairman declared that the meeting had been a success and had stimulated new enthusiasm for a global satellite communications system.

Such a system, Intelsat (The International Telecommunications Satellite Consovtium), has existed since 1964. Intelsat now has satellites over the Atlantic and Pacific, and, despite the conference's indecision, their transmissions of telephone and television signals will continue unaffected.

Leonard H. Marks, chairman of the conference and also chairman of the U.S. delegation, assessed the meeting's results at a press briefing.

EDUCATIONAL COURSE

For smaller nations, he said, the conference constituted a "process of education" — a month to learn about Intelsat's operations and accumulate the technical and financial data necessary for active participation.

Marks said that a special committee will begin meeting in Washington, probably at the end of May, to help resolve the conference's unsettled issues. The full conference will then reconvene on Nov. 18 to consider the different texts this committee has drafted.

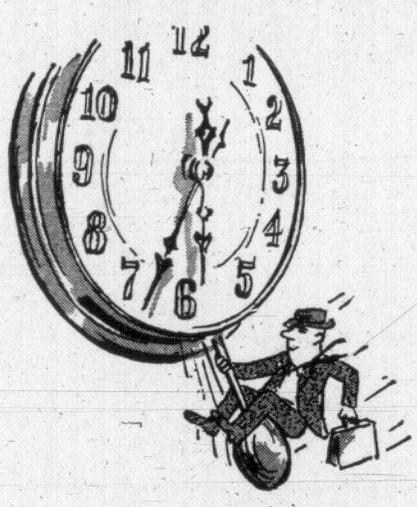

One key problem is whether a U.S. firm, Comsat (the Communications Satellite Corp.), should continue managing Intelsat daily operations. Many European nations want an "international secretariat" to replace Comsat.

MANY MEMBERS

Intersat currently has 68 members, and what the conference ultimately decides may determine whether Intelsat can attract a large group of non-members: the Soviet Union and her eastern European allies.

The Soviet Union was among 30 "observers" at the conference, and Marks praised its role. He said that the observer nations had "contributed substantially" to the meeting and that their comments had always been relevant.

Strong, New Laws Proposed To Settle Labor Disputes

TRUDEAU STILL HAS MISSILE DOUBTS

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau returned to Ottawa today with questions about the "moral and political" rightness of the proposed U.S. anti-ballistic missile system still unresolved in two days of talks with President Nixon.

"The general question" of the ABM system "has not been answered in my mind," Trudeau said at a Canadian Embassy news conference after he met Nixon for a formal leave-taking in the White House rose garden Tuesday.

Did Nixon Talks Achieve Anything?

By ANTHONY WESTELL

The two days of Nixon-Trudeau talks have been at a high level. There has been a good deal of pomp, pagentry and puffery, ranging from the flattery of a state dinner to the studied informality of a presidential arm thrown in a comradely way around the prime ministerial shoulders.

Westell

An assessment now has to be tentative because we do not yet know fully what went on behind closed doors. And it has to be made in the realistic context of what could reasonably be suggested by dramatized news stories.

Both Canadian and U.S. sources insist that this was primarily a get-acquainted mission. Nixon has already been to Europe to lay out his lines of communication with U.S. allies there. He now wanted to establish his relations with the northern neighbor, Ally and trading partner he wanted to explore the attitudes of a prime minister who has been oversold here as a jet-set swinger and radical thinker—the antithesis of Nixon's solid conservatism.

Trudeau, for his part, has been busy at home and had not pressed for an early meeting with the new president, but was pleased to be asked to Washington and curious to size-up Nixon for himself.

No Hard Decisions

There were also some current problems which would have to be negotiated between the two governments, and which might best be set on the road to solution by the two heads of government indicating their interest in them.

There were, in other words, no hard or urgent decisions to be made here and every reason why Trudeau and Nixon should at least appear to get on well together. Indeed, if they had not been warm and well disposed toward each other in these circumstances it would have been rather alarming.

So there is no cause to be euphoric about the friendly relations that have been proclaimed, and no reason to be dismayed because no great decisions have been made.

For example, attention should not focus on the ABM question, and what has nor has not been agreed in this area. News reports have concentrated on this issue because it happens to be a fresh subject of political controversy both in Canada and the United States. But the truth is that it has not a dominating question on the Trudeau-Nixon agenda.

Pointed Questions

The Canadian mission was briefed on technical aspects of the U.S. safeguard system, and on the way Canadian air space might be involved. Trudeau asked some pointed questions about the rationale behind the U.S. decision to deploy ABMs. But there was no element of conflict in the talks, and the political as opposed to technical discussions on the subject were not much in the area of U.S. - Canadian relations, but in the general context of how ABMs fit into Nixon's desire to negotiate with the Soviet Union on arms limitation.

Nor should too much be made at this stage of agreements on oil, wheat and satellites. Canadian officials are genuinely delighted that: the Nixon administration not only agreed to early talks on updating the continental market arrangements to take account of large new oil discoveries in Alaska, but also agreed to put into the joint statement the phrase that there is a "common interest of the two countries in the expansion of cross-order movement of energy." This is held to imply an expanding rather than a contracting market for Canadian oil in the U.S.

Australia is Key

U.S. ministers made no attempt to deny that they have undercut international grain agreement prices, and promised to join with Canada in the forthcoming world conference on wheat prices in trying to restore the floor. The key to this problem, it is said, is Australia, a major exporter which began price-cutting. Prime Minister John Gorton will be here in a few days to meet Nixon before going to Ottawa, and will be pressed in both capitals to join in the attempt to restore price levels.

Nixon cut swiftly through the bureaucratic process to agree in principle that the U.S. will provide launch facilities for Canada's domestic satellite.

But as Trudeau himself emphasized Tuesday, the agreements in these three

Picketing Rule Changes Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A government-commissioned study in labor-management relations in Canada recommends creation of a public interest disputes commission with powers just short of compulsory arbitration.

WOODS
. . . to reduce strikes

This is but one of a multitude of recommendations by the study group, headed by Dean H. D. Woods of McGill University, in its report on Canadian industrial relations tabled in the Commons today by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

The 100,000-word report is packed with social comment and economic theory.

Other recommendations propose greater powers by conciliation officers, new picketing and boycotting laws, creation of a federal-provincial incomes-and-cost research board, retention of the right to strike in the federal public service and a "bill of rights" and independent judiciary for union members.

The Woods commission was established in December, 1966. Many of its recommendations concern the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, the legislation covering workers in areas under federal jurisdiction.

SUGGEST COMMISSION

The key recommendations:

—Creation of a three-member public interest disputes commission, independent of government departments and reporting to the prime minister. It would determine special procedures for resolving disputes in industries under federal jurisdiction where the public interest is likely to be jeopardized.

—This commission could impose procedures short of arbitration, seizure and trusteeship binding for periods of up to three years.

—An incomes and costs research board would be established as an "educational and advisory body" which would not publish guidelines. The provinces would be involved, possibly through membership on a federal-provincial advisory council.

—The right to strike by federal employees should not be removed. "We are mindful of the corrosive effects of compulsory arbitration, which would be the only reasonable alternative . . ." Consideration should be given to combining the Canada labor relations board and public service staff relations board.

—A code for primary and secondary picketing would give workers the right to refuse to cross picket lines to do work normally done by strikers. In other situations, workers refusing to cross lines would be subject to disciplinary action.

—Legislation prescribing basic procedural rights in internal union affairs, including the right to be heard, to be tried by an impartial body, to counsel and so on. A public review board would hear appeals where union membership is to be suspended or ended.

CITES MANY STRIKES

The report notes a rash of strikes in recent years, many of them affecting the public which has a "predisposition to blame unions and collective bargaining for inflation." Nevertheless, the report concludes ". . . We are confident that collective bargaining can adjust and can survive."

"The collective bargaining system, if it is to survive, must change to reflect the nature and functioning of the employer and the environment."

"The challenge will be to integrate free collective bargaining with industrial and national planning, a challenge which has not been met in social countries."

Such bargaining was only one of the many possible mechanisms through which inflationary forces are transmitted. It might help to retard inflation through long-term agreements "which temporarily hold wages below the level to which the forces of the market could drive them."

Victoria Man Wins $52,000; Decides to Take Short Holiday

A 46-year-old B.C. civil servant took the day off, but called on his colleagues in the Legislative Buildings today after winning $52,000 in the Irish sweepstake.

This afternoon he was in the back room of a downtown candy store he and his sisters own, helping with the making of chocolate easter eggs.

Arthur W. Lees, 2612 Richmond, learned at 6:30 a.m. today that he had won $52,000 on second-place Saratoga Skiddy in the Lincolnshire Handicap at Doncaster, England.

"I'll say it was a surprise," he said. "I've been buying sweep tickets ever since the last war and never won a cent before. "How will I spend the money? Well, spending money is never very difficult. It's how you spend it that matters, and I shall take my time deciding."

Although he is a third-generation candy maker, Lees' regular employ is in the B.C. government water rights branch as a draughtsman.

SHARE GOOD NEWS

Just after 8:30 a.m., he left his trim, well-kept bungalow on Richmond and drove down to the Legislative Buildings to "share the good news" with his colleagues.

But, before starting work, Lees phoned the good news to his sister, Joan, in Prince George.

"She was simply thrilled," he said.

Joan and another sister, Winifred of Victoria, are his partners in Lees English Sweet Shop at 643 Yates Street. The business was founded by their grandfather, Job Lees, in Halifax, Yorkshire, in 1892.

In 1911, Job migrated to Medicine Hat, and operated a store in partnership with his son, Harold. They moved to Victoria in 1928 and opened a third candy store on View Street.

Lees and his sisters have owned the store on Yates since their father's death in 1967.

Lees is taking a short holiday from his government job and will ponder the problem of how best to use his winnings on the sweep.

Lees is one of six Canadians

Lower Deductible Clauses Allowed in Plan, Peterson

Attorney-General Peterson Tuesday said there is nothing in the government's proposed new auto insurance scheme to prevent underwriters providing collision insurance without any deductible or just a nominal deductible.

His statements, in an interview, contradicted the criticisms of Jack Robertson, president of the Insurance Agents' Association of B.C.

Robertson said the proposed $250 statutory limit on lawsuits for collision repair costs means insurance companies will decline to insure car owners for collision cover below $250.

"Why should it?" demanded Peterson in reply.

NO REASON

"The damage can be recovered up to $250 so there is no reason why there shouldn't be a lower deductibility.

"And it shouldn't be more expensive. It's when it gets above $250 that it becomes more expensive because there's no recovery."

The attorney-general said insurance firms may tend to write only $250 deductible collision policies but that would be their own decision.

"I would agree that the $250 would be more common but there is nothing in the legislation to prohibit a deductibility of less than $250," he said.

Peterson said the proposal followed the Wootton Royal Commission proposal to create an "incentive" for safer driving by prohibiting recovery of all collision repair costs in court, but he pointed out the government bill did not go as far as the $100 maximum recovery the royal commission proposed.

YOUNGER DRIVERS

He said that with the $250 ceiling on lawsuits and optional collision insurance, younger drivers will benefit most.

He said as a rule the younger drivers own older cars and cannot afford high premiums for collision coverage.

Peterson said he doubted that the mandatory ceiling on collision recoveries would result in insurance companies boosting the premium rates even for "innocent" drivers involved in accidents.

This had been suggested by Robertson also as another consequence of the bill.

Meanwhile, Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) told reporters the government plan will sweeten the pot of private insurance companies by lifting medical and hospital expenses from accident claims.

He said medical and hospital bills will be charged to medicare and hospitalization programs under the new legislation instead of to the auto insurance firms as they are at present.

"This bill just sweetens the pot for private insurance companies by passing the financial burden on to the public purse as represented by these (medicare and hospitalization) plans," said Macdonald.

Egyptian Oil Plants Crippled by Barrage

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked an Arab guerrilla base near the Jordanian town of Salt today, the army announced.

A spokesman said all planes returned safely.

Salt is 10 miles east of the Jordan River ceasefire line and about 15 miles west of Amman, the Jordanian capital.

Guerrilla bases around Salt came under heavy Israeli attack last summer, Israel charging that the barren, stony area is packed with saboteurs staging raids against the Jewish state. Heavier military action has centred lately on the Suez Canal.

Egypt's Port Suez, at the southern neck of the Canal, appears to have been crippled by the four-hour Israeli artillery barrage Monday, an authoritative military source said today.

The source said both oil refineries at the port were hit by Israeli guns. Port operations were severely reduced and the damage halted the flow of oil from the offshore Morgan field in the Red Sea, that supplies about 8,500,000 tons of crude oil a year, two-thirds of Egypt's requirements.

$540,800 Bank Theft

LONDON (Reuters)—A four-man gang robbed a bank here today and escaped with jewels and cash worth about $540,800. Before leaving they locked the manager inside the safe. Then they locked up the bank and drove off in a car.

VICTORIA'S WEATHER TIES RECORD FOR DAY

A temperature record was equalled Wednesday when the thermometer nudged over the 60-degree mark in Greater Victoria.

Weatherman Allan McQuarrie said today it was the first time it was that balmy on March 25 since 1934. He added that 60 degrees were also registered in 1908 and in 1926.

He said it should remain sunny and warm through Friday with a bit of cloud activity Thursday morning.

Stay in for Present Urges NATO Review

OTTAWA (UPI)—Parliament's external affairs and defence committee recommended today that Canada stay in the NATO alliance and continue to maintain troops in Europe.

In a majority report tabled in the House of Commons, the committee presented five basic recommendations urging that "no action" be taken to withdraw from the alliance "at the present time."

The five recommendations are:

- Continued Canadian membership in the alliance.
- Canada should continue to maintain its present troop strength in Europe.
- A prompt review of the country's military role in NATO should be undertaken so that negotiations with the Allies might take place in time to order new equipment.
- Canada should maintain its present roles at least until present equipment becomes obsolete.
- Whatever course of action the government took, the committee recommended that there is no role of neutrality that would be acceptable to Canada.

Under th' new insurance law you pay premiums an' likely pay fer yer accident too. So whut's new?

Arthur Mayse

For the past couple of weeks, I've been hoping that the moderator of the United Church of Canada was only kidding when he suggested that parents should support their early-wedded young for 10 years or even longer after they leave the nest.

But just the other evening, Rev. John Baird McClure chose to enlarge his spine-chilling view on television. Mom and Dad, this worthy but deluded churchman insisted, should be willing to forego a new luxury car in order to help the young marrieds complete their education.

At this point, let us look in on a representative couple who undertook to translate the moderator's theory into fact.

The time is nine years from now, and the scene is the old plantation. It could use a new roof and a coat of paint. On the potholed drive sits what looks like a pile of junk. As we approach, it takes the shape of a car. Nobody in his right mind would call it a luxury model.

Working on it is a father we'll call Joe. He looks up as a neat little sports job turns in off the street.

A young man gets out. He is casually dressed, as university students tend to be, and there's a touch of grey in his beard.

"Y'know, Dad," he says, "it's about time you got a new heap."

"One of these years," Joe says in a vague sort of way. "What is it this time, Son?"

"I guess you forgot. It's allowance day."

★

Joe straightens from his haywiring, and brushes off his patched knees. Releuctantly, he reaches for the ballpoint and cheque book handy in his hip pocket.

"Your mother and I grow no younger," he says. "Think maybe you and Joyce will be able to make it on your own pretty soon?"

His son gives him a reproachful glance. "Dad, it isn't even 10 years yet, and you know what the moderator said. . . ."

"Yes, yes, of course. It's just that I don't know how much longer I can stand the moonlighting, Son. The fellows at the shop are starting to call me Pokey Joe. I drop things and fall asleep on my feet. Then there's your mother. Her washing maching broke down again, and she needs new glasses."

He sighs "Here you are. Try to stretch it a little, eh?"

Son departs. Joe mooches down to the house. Inside, his wife, Agnes, is critically inspecting her spring-winter-summer-fall coat. It is of an age to match Joe's car.

She pours tea. One cup is cracked, the other has lost its handle.

They sip. Finally Joe clears his throat and looks up.

"I've been thinking," he says.

"So have I," says Agnes. "About the moderator . . . he could be wrong."

Joe rises in grim silence. He crosses to the phone, calls his bank, and tells 'em to stop payment on that last cheque.

★

Ridiculous? Yes: but no more so than well-intentioned Dr. McClure's assumption that the run-of-the-mill parent could or would enter into so fantastic and corrosive a relationship.

I'm all for parental aid in need. There are those aiming for professions that require lengthy training whose lives would be rough indeed without it. But such buckshee as Dr. McClure proposes in the name of inter-family unity could only lead to an even higher divorce rate.

It is plain, in fact, that the moderator either didn't think this one through, or inhabits a different world than most of us.

What the young people I meet yearn for isn't indefinite support but a chance to live their independent lives.

This is part of growing up, and wise parents recognize it as such. By letting go gracefully when the times comes, they stand to gain far more in affection, trust and loyalty from their children than any marathon support program could produce.

'GREENBELT SUBSIDIZING' PROTESTED

Property owners in the Blenkinsop Valley are being asked to subsidize the rest of the municipality for greenbelt, a resident told the lands and planning committee Tuesday night.

The comment was made by E. H. Lohbrunner, 1101 Lohbrunner, after 55 persons heard a summary of the Blenkinsop Valley Study draft proposal prepared by the Saanich planning department.

He said filling in the urban areas will be at the expense of valley land owners.

The valley was surrounded by developed areas but most of the valley owners have chosen not to subdivide.

"Now I believe they are being asked to provide greenbelt for the entire municipality at their expense," he said.

"The value of the land will be far less than if it is allowed to be developed into urban development."

He also disagreed that it will cost $2 to $3 million to provide drainage for the flood area if this area is developed.

Another resident asked about possible incentives to maintain ownership in the face of rising taxes, rather than subdividing.

He was told that one of the report's recommendations is that council press for legislation which would allow local government more tax flexibility particularly in areas of deferred and preferential taxation.

Ald. Leslie Passmore told the meeting that the report has convinced him that Saanich council, in order to get proper development, will have to institute certain regulations and bylaws.

"Some of this will be unpopular," he said. "I am most impressed with the presentation of this study. I'll have to have a stiff backbone."

Ald. Edith Gunning said she is "very impressed" with the report. It was "certainly not a jigsaw puzzle. Whatever we finally decide, we are working on a pretty sound basis."

Committee chairman Ald. Alan Newberry said it will take a number of meetings to put the recommendations in priority "let alone consider the ramifications. Lands and planning (committee) will be discussing this plan over the next number of weeks."

The committee voted to refer the report to the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission, a council-appointed citizens group which makes recommendations on planning and rezoning matters.

Containment Policy Sought In Development of Saanich

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Major changes directly involving rural areas of Saanich municipality, but affecting the general public because of future development, are recommended in a planning report made public Tuesday night.

The changes are designed to keep urban development within the urban and semi-urban areas and hold the rural and semi-rural areas in large sizes until development moves outwards.

The recommendations are contained in the Blenkinsop Valley Study, a draft proposal with implications far beyond the valley area.

The report, dealing with basic development policy for Saanich as a whole and not just the valley, recommends:

- Immediate action to raise the 1.6-acre minimum subdivision areas to five acres. This would affect roughly half the municipality —the northern, western and west-central sections primarily;
- Special review of Cordova Bay and Broadmead areas;
- Council agree to the limitation of the sewer enterprise area and endorse a policy that its expansion will only take place through periodic review of planning, servicing and development policies;
- Land for future residential development should be retained in parcels of more than five acres until it is needed for small-lot development and services kept to the absolute minimum to avoid the chain reaction of successive subdivision;
- Land for residential development should be made available on a carefully-staged basis, co-ordinated with population growth and Saanich's financial resources. At any given time, land zoned for small-lot development should accommodate not more than five years growth;
- Early development of all serviced lots in a subdivision should be encouraged.

Minimum of 10 Acres

For the Blenkinsop Valley area in particular—an area almost the same size as the municipality of Esquimalt—a 10-acre subdivision minimum was recommended in the flooding area around the lake and five acres elsewhere.

A year ago, Saanich placed a five-acre minimum on the valley to prevent unsightly future development until a plan was made. Previous minimums were five acres around the lake and 1.6 acres elsewhere.

The plan presented to the municipal lands and planning committee was described as deliberately a draft one.

"There will undoubtedly be a good deal of comment and suggestions arise from committee discussion, consideration by the Advisory Planning Commission, residents of the valley and, it is hoped, from citizens in all parts of the municipality," said planner Tom Loney.

"After this comment has had a chance to develop we will be revising the draft where necessary and presenting a final report."

The report said a policy of permitting subdivision between two levels—10,000 square feet (urban-type lots) and under five acres—will create "tremendous problems" for the municipality.

The existing sewer enterprise area will provide enough serviced land for 15 to 20 years of growth.

(This area includes the presently sewered areas, plus the adjacent 3,400 acres—three-quarters the size of the city of Victoria—which Saanich intends to sewer in the coming five years).

The area contains about 900 vacant sewered lots and about 7,750 vacant lots which are unsewered at the moment. Population projections show it will, mathematically-speaking, take 23 years to fully utilize the lot potential of 8,650 within the sewer enterprise area.

This supply of land will last even longer if the present apartment building trend continues, since this provides accommodation at greater densities than single-family houses.

Enough for 15-20 Years

"It is certainly safe to reach the conclusion that the (sewer) enterprise area as it now stands will supply enough land to meet all anticipated demands for 15 to 20 years," the report states.

The sewer enterprise area will serve the fringes of the Blenkinsop Valley study area and later expansion will cover the northern part. At a still later date, areas in the central and southern parts should be developed—when demand and costs warrant.

The valley has open areas well worth preserving for the benefit of all citizens and has an important role as a water storage area for the drainage of the region.

The report says a five-acre lot can be readily subdivided into urban lots and would be a worthwhile proposition for modern and attractive "cluster" subdivision.

An intermediate size, such as 1.6 acres, "in practice can rarely be further subdivided. Fragmentation of land ownership and lack of co-operation between owners generally thwarts plans for further subdivision and in effect, the intermediate size becomes the final lot size."

A five-acre lot was not too demanding on municipal services but intermediate-sized lots are generally residential in character "and residents expect a full range of services. This is a hopelessly costly proposition for the residents and the taxpayers at large."

Six years ago, the planning department produced two reports which recommended two containment areas into which residential development would be funnelled to avoid unsightly suburban sprawl. Since 1963, 92 per cent of all residential development has occurred in these areas.

Other points in the planning report include:

- Studies show it is impractical to build even light structures in the flooding area. And if it disappeared into development, drainage costs would be $2 to $3 million and it was essential to establish the principle that owners of this land "cannot expect the taxpayer at large to bear this expense;"
- Under prevailing conditions, it is "difficult to envisage" agriculture as more than an inferim use in the valley. But it would be "disastrous in the long term" to destroy agricultural land adjacent to cities.
- Recommendation that an open space-urban concept be adopted, to preserve open space along with urban residential development in areas which can most economically be serviced;
- Connecting links of parkland should be acquired to link the flood area with Mount Douglas Park, Beaver Lake Park and Swan Lake;

THE VALLEY: AN AREA OF PROMISE, PROBLEMS

The Blenkinsop Valley Study, prepared by the Saanich planning department, runs to 40 pages and includes almost as many pages of appendices and maps.

Some of the key parts reflecting the recommendations include:

- "The Blenkinsop Valley is a largely undeveloped and very attractive area. Its future cannot be considered in isolation from the future of the entire municipality and the capital region;"
- "The valley has an aesthetic and natural value that could be a priceless contribution to an open space inheritance for the people of Saanich. Its value is difficult, if not impossible, to measure in dollar terms, but it exists and must not lightly be cast aside;"
- "The future timing and extent of urban development within the Blenkinsop Valley is irrevocably bound up with matters of municipal policy and of real estate demand. The municipality must strike a delicate balance between the provision of services to an area of the municipality and the cost of these services to all taxpayers in the municipality;"
- "The Blenkinsop Valley is an area of both promise and problems. It has a natural character that appears worthy of preservation, at least in part. Unless development is planned and co-ordinated with over-all municipal growth, much of the charm of the area will be lost and the cost to residents of the valley and municipality at large will be high;"
- "The forces influencing the valley are those at work in the municipality as a whole. In turn, the implications and recommendations for the Blenkinsop Valley must be considered in the context of the entire municipality. This is why some of the recommendations go beyond the immediate study area and will lead to a continuing assessment and review of planning and development policies;"
- "There is no economic, engineering or planning justification to providing trunk sewers within the Blenkinsop Valley during the life of the sewer enterprise. Future demand for a plan period of 15 to 20 years appears well catered for by areas that can be serviced by currently-planned trunk sewers;"
- "It cannot be stated too strongly that we are indeed laying the ground rules for the future. Too often in the past the effect has been negative. Hasty subdivision to small lots decades ahead of demand effectively freezes the development of the land;"
- "A valuable lesson that we can learn from our early development history is patience. The lure of short-term profits has proven an illusion, or has destroyed the potential for rational and valuable development later;"
- "The transition from a rural environment with minimal services to an urban area, with adequate services, has always proven to be difficult, frustrating and costly, unless issues and problems have been understood and correct action taken;"
- "It was discovered that it cost more to provide only unsurfaced road and water supply to a 40,000 square foot lot than to provide roads, curbs, sidewalks, street lights, water, sanitary sewer and storm sewer to a 7,000 square foot lot. It costs approximately $250 less to provide full services to an urban lot than to provide road and water to a 1.6-acre lot;"
- "It is difficult to imagine any particular advantage to subdivision to an intermediate size. The total value of a five-acre lot will increase in time, particularly as it preserves the potential for large-scale comprehensive development, and potentially crippling servicing costs will be avoided;"
- "It is the clear responsibility of the municipality to be 'reasonable' and by adopting careful economic servicing policies it is being reasonable to all who chose to live in the municipality. There is absolutely no obligation to support the 'maximum return viewpoint' of individual land owners."

Blenkinsop Valley property-owners will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in Lochside School, on Royal Oak Avenue, to discuss the municipal planning report.

The meeting was arranged by the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers' Association.

Tests Planned On Dog's Brain

Tests for rabies are being conducted on the severed head of a dog which attacked a Sooke boy and his mother Monday.

Health officials here said it is unlikely the dread disease will be found present but the tests are "standard procedure."

Dr. T. J. Bailey of Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, said the head of the German Shepherd is being sent to a federal animal pathology laboratory in Vancouver.

He said the procedure is followed wherever any animal attacks a larger animal, such as man, and its viciousness is unexplainable.

BRAIN EXAMINATION

When such animals are shot, as happened in this case, it is important that they not be shot in the head as the brain must be examined.

If traces of rabies are found, the incubation period of the disease, which varies in duration, is lengthy enough to permit treatment of the person who was bitten. Untreated, it is fatal.

Meantime, the condition of four-year-old Andrew England of East Sooke Road continues to be "fair." He and his mother, Mrs. Gladys England, who is in good condition, are both in St. Joseph's Hospital.

TURNED SAVAGE

Both suffered head and face injuries when the dog, which belonged to the family, suddenly turned savage. A short time previously it had been playing with the boy and licking his face.

The dog tore a piece of scalp from the boy before being pulled away by Mrs. England. The dog then bit her shoulder and face and tore off part of her ear, police said.

Mrs. England was able to lock the dog in her basement but it later broke out and was shot by a neighbor on advice of police.

ON BEACH

The attack took place on a beach just 100 yards from the England home.

The dog, obtained from the SPCA about a week ago, was not the German Shepherd which was seized from a Victoria home last November when found in an emaciated condition, SPCA officials said.

The boy's father, J. C. England, told police he did not blame the SPCA for the dog's behavior. The SPCA had earlier reports that the animal was accustomed to children and attached to them.

New School To Be Built Near Park

Saanich School District 63 has obtained a site for its proposed new senior secondary school on the north end of Saanich peninsula.

It will be built on an eight-and-a-half acre site fronting on McDonald Park Road adjoining the 28-acre North Saanich parkland site.

Saanich school board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott said the site has been obtained thanks to "excellent co-operation" between North Saanich and Sidney councils.

The school is to open in 1972 with a student body of 300 to 400 students and eventually will be a teaching centre for more than 700 youngsters, she stated.

Mrs. Parrott said the school board hopes to develop the adjoining park jointly with North Saanich.

This will make the school readily available to the community at large and the community park will be fully accessible to the students.

TREND

She said this is part of a trend to avoid duplication of community services where a community hall might be erected only a few blocks from a school gym-auditorium or a playground be provided next to a park.

The new school is expected to relieve crowding in the Claremont Senior Secondary and will greatly shorten the distance students in the north end of the peninsula must travel to classes.

Scales Closed After Truck Sags Platform

City scales on Store St. were put out of commission today when a heavily loaded truck caused extensive damage to the weighing device.

The truck, loaded with limestone destined for the Provincial Museum rock gardens, went over the scales around 10:30 a.m. and caused the weighing platform to sag a few inches below its normal level.

Operator Les Cannon immediately blocked off both ends of the approach to the 30-ton capacity scales.

City engineer Jim Garnett said the truck had been directed to the Department of Highways weigh station on the Pat Bay Highway.

Garnett and a representative of Toledo Scales were on hand to check the scales, but were unable to determine the extent of the damage.

The scales are used by companies who wish to determine the weight of their loads and by operators directed by the police to weigh their vehicles.

"We don't have any means of weighing trucks until we have rectified the trouble here," Garnett said.

Athletic Park Ready for Play This Weekend

Royal Athletic Park can reopen this weekend two weeks ahead of schedule, says Victoria parks superintendent Herb Warren.

Closed for the past year to permit a complete re-seeding of the playing field area and for adjustments to drainage and sprinkling systems, the park was due to host its first game April 9.

But this morning Warren said the grass damaged slightly by snow-mold during the past winter has come along better than expected.

"I shall be informing the community recreation department today that the park can be used as early as this weekend if they want to book anything in," Warren said.

Re-opening of the park will give the Victoria O'Keefes soccer club a home for its stretch drive for a playoff spot in the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

Chant to Take 'Real Look' At Road Tangle

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant held out slim hope this morning that the Blanshard Street extension may eventually link with the Pat Bay Highway.

News that the provincial government had virtually abandoned the proposed Pat Bay Highway route designed to connect with Vicotria's $1 million Blanshard extension shocked city officials over the weekend.

Interviewed this morning Chant said he is not completely familiar with all the details of the problem but promised "to take a 'real look and see just what the problem is as soon as the session is over."

Chant is one of the two Victoria representatives in the legislature. The other is Minister of Trade and Commerce Waldo Skillings. He was unavailable for comment this morning.

'REAL PROBLEMS'

"I am following the matter with keen interest," Chant said. "But the fact is that at present I don't know all the details and won't until I can sit down and talk with the department of highway people.

"I don't know why the road is going here instead of there, but I am aware that there are some real problems. I don't know just what they are."

In the meantime former highways minister P. A. Gaglardi has answered queries on his stand on the controversial issue with an abrupt "no comment."

Gaglardi was in charge of the highways department in 1962 when written approval to go ahead with the Blanshard extension to tie-in with the projected Pat Bay Highway was given.

Ask The Times

Q. A friend of mine wrote from England recently asking why I had such a high street number, were there really 4,000 houses on the street? Can you please give me a simple explanation? T.H.W.

A. It is Canadian custom to number streets in blocks, increasing by 100 per block. The method resulted from early-days abundance of space, allowing for additional buildings to be added after the initial creation of each block.

Q. Could you tell me where to write for a birth certificate issued in Saskatchewan? W.F.

A. The address is: Division of Public Health, Vital Statistics Division, Legislative Buildings, Regina.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.
